GREAT PLANS MADE

Dairymen Expect Much Good to Result From Meeting.

AT SALEM DECEMBER 10-11

Invitations Have Also Been Sent to Washington Association—Silver Trophies Offered for Best Displays of Dairy Exhibit.

Elaborate plans are being made by the officers of the Oregon State Dairy Association, which meets at Salem, December 29 and 30. President F. L. Kent, of Corvallis, president of the association, has been in Portland conferring with Secretary W. L. Crissey. Arrangements are now practically complete for the convention, and the programme has been made up. Carl Abrams, of the Salem Board of Trade, has been in the city perfecting the plans for the coming gathering, for that organization is to cooperate with the dairymen in arranging the convention.

There will be two sessions each day of the convention and they will be held in the Liberty Theater. A large hall over the Salem Hardware Company's store has been secured for the display of exhibits, of which there will be a large showing. In addition to the large attendance of dairymen of this state, many are expected to attend the Washington Association. Secretary Crissey has sent an invitation to every member of the Washington Association. A Government expert will also be there from the Agricultural Department at Washington. Three handsome silver cups are offered as first prizes for the best exhibits of cheese, dairy and creamery butter. A long list of other prizes is also offered for the best showing in the various classes of exhibits and a man has been secured to devote his time to arranging the displays to the best advantage. The business men of Salem are making up the prizes to be offered. Exhibits should be shipped in care of the Salem Board of Trade. This will insure their being taken care of properly.

On the night of December 10 there will be a gathering of creamery men in the Salem Board of Trade rooms. The dairymen will meet with them.

The programme for the coming convention follows:

Welcomes, Mayor Rodgers, Salem; response to annual address, Professor F. L. Kent, president Oregon State Dairy Association; "Dairy Associations," Paul V. Marks, Deputy State Dairy and Food Commissioner; a plea for the better calf, William M. Lead, Portland; "Needed" improvement in milk production," Mrs. S. A. Yeakam, vice-president Oregon State Dairy Association; Marefield; "Dairying East of the Cascades," J. W. Bush, La Grande; "Tuberculosis," Dr. N. Hutchinson, Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture; "The Special Purpose Cow," Dr. James Withcomb, director Experiment Station, Corvallis; "An Appeal for Better Cream," C. H. Frare, field manager Corvallis Creamery Company.

AIMED AT DOBSON

New Ordinance Said to Refer to Building Inspector.

WOULD OUST HIM FROM JOB

Council Said Not to Like Way He Has Enforced Building Ordinances—Council to Consider Veto of Mayor Lane.

The City Council will meet in regular session at 9:30 o'clock this morning, after holding an all-day meeting yesterday. Many matters of importance are on the list for today, one of which is the veto of Mayor Lane on the so-called eight-inch-walls ordinance, which in brief allows thinner walls in brick buildings outside the fire limits. There is also a new ordinance to be considered, which is said to be aimed chiefly at Building Inspector Dobson. It defines the duties of that office and specifies that the inspector must have had at least ten years of actual experience. As Mr. Dobson has had but eight, it is regarded as being designed to oust him.

Building Inspector Dobson has been very stringent in enforcing all the ordinances, so much so that he has offended some Councilmen, it is said. This is especially true in the case of State Senator Nottingham, who secured from the Council a special permit to build a frame structure of considerable proportions in the fire limits. Mr. Dobson fought this action so stubbornly that it resulted in a written opinion from City Attorney Kavanaugh, holding that special permits are without authority of law. None have been issued since. The incident, however, caused much bitterness against Mr. Dobson.

When the proposed thin-wall ordinance was under consideration by the Council committee on health and police, and when it went to the Council, Mr. Dobson opposed it, but it passed. Mayor Lane vetoed it. In support of his position in the matter, Mr. Dobson wrote to many building inspectors and fire chiefs throughout the country, and has received replies from several. All are strongly opposed to thin brick walls, and unhesitatingly denounce such legislation.

The following letter is from Walter Laps, Chief of the Los Angeles Fire Department:

In reply to yours of November 13, I say that we do not permit eight-inch brick walls to go higher than one story, and under no consideration would we permit an ordinance to be passed allowing such construction. They are very dangerous in case of fire and if I am properly informed, it was just such construction which caused the death of poor Chief Sullivan, of San Francisco, during the first shock of his quake. He slept in an engine-house, adjoining a hotel, which towered over his roof; this eight-inch wall fell through the roof of the engine-house and crushed his head. I can gladly see that this has been put through your Council by people desiring to put up cheap construction, regardless of human life. Use this letter anywhere you desire, as an opponent of such construction.

P. H. Shaughnessy, Chief of the San Francisco Fire Department, opposed the proposition in general, and concluded by saying:

We had an actual experience in this matter three years back, when the side-walls of a two-story brick building, in which the fire was in progress, fell out on the roof of a two-story frame adjoining it, and crushing through the roof thereof, killed three firemen, who were on the top of the frame building. I am entirely opposed to any ordinance requiring only eight-inch walls.

The Council will also have to pass on the vetoes of the Mayor in regard to the franchise for an Alberta-street extension to the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company, and also the increase in the license fees of street peddlers.

TEA FOR PATTON HOME

Function Is Most Successful and Programme Interesting.

The tea given yesterday afternoon at the Patton Home, for the benefit of that institution, was in every way a successful affair. The programme, which was in charge of Mrs. Millie Perkins, was most pleasing and excited much favorable comment. Notably well-received were the selections by Miss Cornelia Barker, Miss Flynn, young Miss Beatrice Wilson, and the several songs and piano numbers by Mrs. Perkins.

The hostess of the afternoon, Mrs. George Chamberlain, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. J. C. Hare, Mrs. D. G. Townsend and Mrs. Knutner. In charge of the dining-room were Mrs. Robert Glafke and Mrs. C. Watson. The decorations of chrysanthemums and greens were very effective, and the parlors were crowded with guests from 2 o'clock until after 5

TURKEYS ARE AT PREMIUM

DEMAND FOR FOWLS IS FAR GREATER THAN SUPPLY.

Although Birds Were More Plentiful Than Ever Before, Orders for 3000 Are Refused.

Some one in Portland may have to go without turkey this Thanksgiving. The supply, as was feared, proved small for the growing trade of the city, so purchasers would do well to get out early this morning and do their buying, if they have not already done so.

Because of the shortage, prices are high—27 1/2 to 29 cents a pound at retail—but, judging from the way business was booming at the markets yesterday, Portlanders do not begrudge paying this steep price for the royal bird.

The Oregon turkey crop this year was the largest ever produced, but the supply available for the Thanksgiving trade was reduced by the purchase several weeks ago of over 2000 turkeys by the Government for the use of the troops in the Philippines. That left just about the same quantity available for Portland as was on hand last year. The demand, however, is much stronger this year. One year ago, with the bank troubles everywhere, things looked a little hazy in a financial way, and not everybody bought for turkey. This year it is different, and if anyone does not eat turkey Thursday it will be because there are not enough to go around.

The wholesale people got through with their part of the game yesterday. The front street dealers did not handle as many birds as usual, because a large packing firm cut into the business. These packers declare they handled over half of the supply that was sold here. They had to turn down orders yesterday for 2000 turkeys and the front street dealers had orders for about 1000 that they could not fill. With the demand greater than the supply, the wholesale price steadily advanced from 22 cents quoted on the street Monday morning to 36 cents, asked by the packers yesterday afternoon.

The total receipts of dressed turkeys in the past three days were about 150,000 pounds. A good part of this was shipped out to other markets in the filling of early orders.

Quiet Contest at Oregon City.

OREGON CITY, Or., Nov. 24.—(Special.)—City election will be held December 7, and all petitions for nomination must be filed with City Recorder Dimick five days previously. The petitions of Dr. W. E. Carl, who will have no opposition for Mayor, and William Andreen, whose friends are urging him again to become a candidate for Councilman from Ward One, have not yet been filed, nor has the petition of Walter Little, who aspires to be Councilman from Ward One. J. J. Cooke and C. W. Evans are candidates for the short term in the First Ward and J. Michels would like to succeed himself as Councilman from Ward Three. In the Second Ward Dr. M. C. Strickland is the only candidate whose petition has appeared. M. D. Latourette will have no opposition for re-election as Treasurer. The city election will probably be the quietest one in years, as the only contest is in the First Ward.
