

SAVING AX ON LUMBER TARIFF

Committee Hears Lot of Buncombe From Interested Millmen Regarding Duty.

REDUCTION IS FAVORED

Most of Those Testifying Have Plants in Canada—Argument to Save Forest Only Subterfuge.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Wash., Nov. 27.—Advocates of the repeal of the duty on lumber which recently appeared before the House committee on ways and means based their demand for free trade not on the ground that removal of the duty would lessen the cost of lumber to the consumer, but to two prime factors, first, that it would diminish the drain upon the forests of the United States, and thus tend to perpetuate our supply of lumber, and, second, that it would have a tendency to prevent any further advance in the price of lumber; in other words, that it would lend stability to the market price of lumber in America.

No Reduction in Price.

Prior to the hearing before the committee that is to make the original draft of the tariff bill in the coming special session, the repeal of the certain non-lumber had been demanded on the ground that the free admission of foreign lumber to the United States would force down the price of lumber, and yield the purchaser a saving equal to the present duty, $2 per 1000 feet. Yet not a single witness who appeared in advocacy of repeal of this duty contended or expected that any such reduction in price would follow, and in fact all those witnesses who expected that but two witnesses from the removal of the duty would not lower the price of lumber, and in fact all those witnesses who expected to see a reduction in price contended that the duty would be slightly increased. No one expressed the opinion that removal of the $2 duty would force down the price of lumber $2 per 1000 feet, or anything like that amount. Those advocates of repeal who believe that free admission of foreign lumber would tend to prolong the life of American forests held their opinion on the ground that the tariff on lumber, as administered by Gifford Pinchot, of the Forest Service, as head of the National Conservation Commission appointed by the President, has favored the industry a tendency to conserve the natural resources of the country, lumber among them. Without taking up the question of removal of duty on the lumber industry of the United States, these gentlemen argue that every foot of foreign lumber imported into the United States replaces a foot of lumber that would otherwise be cut out of our own forests, and the heavier the imports, the less lumber will be cut at home. They are of the opinion that it is essential to the industry of the United States to maintain the protection afforded the lumber industry by the Dingley tariff.

Motive for Argument.

This conservation argument was advanced by a dozen lumber manufacturers—Americans—who own large tracts of timber land in Canada, and who also operate mills on the Canadian side. None of these men would admit that he wanted lumber placed on the free list so that he might sell more of his Canadian lumber. They were chiefly concerned over the preservation of the American forests. And yet an analysis of the testimony shows that every man in advocacy of the repeal of the duty on lumber, save one, is an owner of Canadian lumber and Canadian lumber mills. The one who is not operating in the United States is M. K. Ruppert, of Minneapolis, is secretary of the Conservation Commission, and his argument was absolutely theoretical. He has no interest in the lumber industry other than what may be held in such an office might manifest. The lumbermen on the other hand, that is, the American operators, are entirely in their demand for retention of the present tariff on lumber. To remove or reduce this tariff would, in their opinion, reduce the price of lumber in the United States to a price that would result in competition with foreign lumbermen employing cheap, Oriental labor, and buying stumpage from the Canadian government at a price far below the current price of stumpage in the United States. Such competition would be disastrous; it would close most of the lumber mills of the Northwest. While these lumbermen felt that the tariff on lumber should be raised, if any change is made, they did not urge the committee, but expressed entire satisfaction with maintenance of the present duty.

Supply From Canada.

The testimony before the committee imported into the United States under a free trade provision in the new tariff law, would come from Canada, and the bulk of Canada's supply would come from British Columbia. Canada has already established an embargo on sawlogs, intended to compel the manufacture of these logs into lumber in Canadian territory. This embargo was raised in the event the United States removed the duty on lumber. Brazil made an export duty on Canadian lumber, and the revenue that formerly went into our treasury was transferred to the Brazilian treasury, and the American consumer continued to pay the old price for his coffee. So it would probably be with Canadian lumber, and the Northwest manufacturers. If our duty of 12 per cent is taken off, Canada is very likely to slap on a duty of the same amount on her exports; the revenue now going into our treasury would be transferred to the Canadian treasury, and the price of Canadian lumber in the American market would remain unchanged. If this contention be correct, say the lumbermen, then the removal of the duty on lumber would do no way benefit the American consumer, nor would it have the slightest tendency to check the cutting of timber in American forests.

Decision in Senate.

As far as the hearings before the ways and means committee are concerned, they are largely unimportant. This committee, or most of its members, manifestly know what position they will take with regard to the leading schedules, and as has been heretofore explained, the lumber interests have but a single enthusiastic friend on that committee, Representative

Forbes, of Michigan. It was the intention of all who observed the attitude of the committee, and followed the trend of its questions, that the committee, if it recorded its opinion, would favor removal, or at least reduction of the duty on lumber. Of course if the committee brings in a bill making such a change in the lumber tariff, it will pass the House in just that shape, for the bill, so far as the House is concerned, will be made in accordance with the opinion of the committee. That means that the real schedule of the lumber, as all other schedules, will take place in the Senate, and it is to their protection Senators that the lumber interests must look for consolation. It is a safe prediction that the lumber tariff will be reduced, if not altogether repealed.
