BIG JOKE, SAYS JACK HORN

Man Accused of Holding Up Three Huskies With Finger Is Held.

Jack Horn, the square-jawed, muscular youth who held up three husky commentors at the point of his index finger, protested that the whole thing was only a big joke, when he was taken up for hearing on a charge of highway robbery, in the Municipal Court yesterday afternoon.

"I'd never think of robbing a man," he declared to Acting Municipal Judge Seabrook. "I saw these three Nelson brothers, all of them huskies, and recognized them. I just wanted to see if they'd put up their hands. So I pointed my fingers at them and up went their hands. I didn't have a revolver and didn't intend taking a thing from them."

This story might have had its effect but for the ugly disposition shown by Horn at the time of the episode. When Police Sergeant Goltz, who saw three men standing on the Steel bridge with their hands elevated, ran to interfere in the robbery, Horn quickly surrendered. But he told the officer it was a lucky thing he didn't have a real gun to defend himself with.

"I had a gun I'd make you smell the end of it," he told Sergeant Goltz at the time.
