Great Northern Official Will Be Asked to Testify, Is Report.

COMMITTEE'S TASK IS BIG

Judicial Indiscretions Involving Several Incorporate Interests of State Have Cause to Fear Publicity, It Is Said.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 7.—(Special.)—As the Root committee's probe goes deeper, it is evident that the investigation may take a decidedly broader scope than that which at first was believed would be sufficient to get at the facts. It is also apparent now that the investigation of Judge Root will not be a whitewash affair and that the resignation of Judge Root did not close the scandal, as Judge Root expected when he yielded to pressure and signed his resignation.

Although members of the committee will not admit it, there has been a leak or two, and it is known that it is contemplated to summon Solicitor Beeg, of the Great Northern, before the examiners. Through press dispatches sent from St. Paul, Beeg admitted the Gordon shortage. It was revealed at the time that no move was made to prosecute Gordon. Gordon has not declared that he was not guilty, but said he thought the Great Northern would not prosecute him.

If the bar committee follows out a line of report that has been touched casually, some attorneys in this state identified with other corporate interests might be dragged into the controversy. There is no parallel for the Gordon case, but there are active rumors of other judicial indiscretions, none of them more than all transgressing the rules of court procedure and of practice.

The committee is anxious to go into the records of the Supreme Court which have a bearing upon the controversy and will make a personal examination. It is unlikely that either Judge Root or Mr. Gordon will be called before the committee has assembled facts covering all the allegations; then it is planned, it is said, to give both of the men an opportunity to be heard.

JURISTS FEEL OFFENDED

Criticism Published Statements Reflecting on Whole Court.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Dec. 7.—(Special.)—The bar committee investigating the Root charges which began a session here this morning hastened its work and left for Seattle on the evening train, although when the committee members left Seattle to come here they had not decided to return home before Wednesday. All the members of the committee were here and began a session in a room adjoining the Supreme Court about 10 o'clock.

During the day Chief Justice Hiram B. Hadley and Justice Mark Fuller were closeted for some time with the committee, the stenographers of the Supreme Court, law librarian and assistant law librarian who were in a room adjoining the committee. These persons, as well as the committee members, absolutely refused information as to any facts brought out or the scope of the investigation here.

This much is certain, there was no hesitancy on the part of the judges to place all facts they knew of in the hands of the committee. The judges are becoming decidedly irritated at some of the attacks a certain portion of the press has made on the entire bench, and it is possible contempt proceedings may be instituted against some of the publishers. This irritation was augmented yesterday when each of the judges received in the mails a copy of the Spokane Chronicle of Saturday, which charged that law clerks in Olympia write all the per curiam decisions and many other decisions of the high court. Accompanying this article were half-tone likenesses of Chief Justice Hadley and Justice Mount. Justice Hadley was highly indignant and deeply grieved because of the article. He said that anyone familiar with the work of the court knows that the members work year in and out, with rarely a holiday, reading briefs and voluminous records often late into the night, sending every morning to master thoroughly each case and give it proper decision. Sometimes briefs will cover 200 printed pages and the record will fill more than 1000 typewritten sheets, out of which must be read.

"Of course, it is absolutely and utterly false that law clerks write or have written any decisions," said he. "When we were far behind with our work some time ago the court did employ Judge Malette, an attorney of age and standing, to brief authorities as an assistance to the judges in considering the cases."

Court Reporter Remington said the Washington Supreme Court members work harder and more earnestly than any other court in the Union. In Wisconsin, for instance, each judge has a private stenographer who is a lawyer who writes decisions from dictation and briefs authorities. Here there are but two stenographers for seven judges and generally the members of the court have to do their own briefing work.

Voters at Renton Will Paste in Candidates' Names on Stickers.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 7.—(Special.)—Without the use of the nominees of either party on the official ballot, a municipal election will take place at Renton tomorrow. Judge George E. Morris, of the Superior Court, decided Saturday that it would be illegal to print the names of the nominees on the ballot, but that the election could proceed under the law of 1883, which allows the voters to use stickers. The names of the candidates are printed on the stickers, which are pasted in place, instead of putting a cross to the right of the name.

Judge Morris made his decision in a mandamus proceeding brought by the anti-administration faction.

LEGISLATIVE HALL UNSAFE

TOO MUCH WEIGHT IN LIBRARY ABOVE.

Floor in Capitol Building in Weakened Condition and Repairs Badly Needed.

SALEM, Or., Dec. 7.—(Special.)—When the legislature meets next month the members of the House of Representatives will find themselves in a position nearly as perilous as that occupied by the man who tried to head a sword suspended by a thread. The Hall of Representatives is directly under the room occupied by the State library and the library floor now has upon it approximately the full weight the supports were designed to sustain. About a year ago it was caused to be repaired, but the cause of the floor was setting. While the library floor is now considered safe, it is probably no more safe than the sword suspended by a thread.

The library-room occupies what was formerly the upper part and gallery of the Hall of Representatives, that hall having been originally two stories high. When the library floor was put in, cast iron pillars were provided extending from the ground up, so that the library floor in the room depends upon the two floors beneath for support, except that the outside walls, which partly support the library floor also support the floor of the Hall of Representatives and the office floor beneath. The plans for the library-room were drawn with the idea that there would be installed 30 double bookcases weighing, when full, 4000 pounds each. There are already 30 double bookcases in the room and 15 single cases, equal in weight to four double cases. There is also stored in the library-room a quantity of documents kept for distribution purposes and equaling in weight three or four times the weight of the books.

In addition, there are a number of very heavy reading tables, not contemplated by the plans for the library. All told, the weight in the library has reached the limit for which the supports were constructed.

About a year ago the supply of Senate and House Journals was delivered at the library and the books were stored in a cloakroom in one corner. A few days later Librarian Gillingham noticed that the floor in that corner had settled more than an inch. As this was at a place where the floor joists were supported by the brick walls of the building, it was apparent that the situation was dangerous and the books were removed at once.

During the legislative session the library-room is used for committee meetings and sometimes when important sessions are being held there are as many as 30 people in the room, making an additional weight of more than 5000 pounds.

New books are added to the library at the rate of 8000 pounds a year. It is therefore apparent that something must be done to make the library-room safe. Additional supports would necessarily pass up through the Hall of Representatives, shutting off the view from parts of that room. There are already four large pillars in the room and these are found very inconvenient. Two solutions for the difficulty have been discussed. One is that if provision should be made for a separate heating plant and printing office, a room could also be provided for the Library Commission, to which could be transferred all the reference books and documents now in the State Library, leaving only the law books in what is now the State Library. The Library Commission could very appropriately take charge of the reference books, which are of no use in a law library. The other suggestion is that the Capitol building be enlarged, either by constructing two additions on the west wing or by extending the east wing, and that office assignments be then shifted so as to provide more space for the library. It is certain that the coming Legislature will be compelled to make some arrangement for increased room, not only for convenience, but for safety.

It is rumored today that there may possibly be an attempt made to swear in the Governor at the hotel on the day set, if that is necessary, and if he lives that long. Whether this can be done remains to be seen, but the fact that it is talked about shows that his friends do not expect to see him return home for reasons of serious illness.

C. S. Williams, of Seattle, who has been here for several days, says that such a proceeding is being talked about, and he does not think it would be seriously considered. Personally, he is of the opinion that Mr. Cosgrove's days are numbered, and he told the writer that he did not believe the patient would be alive by the middle of January.

Gov. Cosgrove did not put in an appearance this morning for his customary bath. The information has leaked out that a party of Seattle and Washington politicians, ostensibly on the way to Los Angeles, will be at the hotel next Tuesday, if they hope to see the Governor-elect, however, they will be disappointed.

Mrs. Cosgrove, worn out by the nursing of her husband, who requires constant attention, is being bothered with letters from friends and strangers, some offering what they term "certain cures." One of these letters came from a hypnotist, who said that he was sure if he could see Mr. Cosgrove he could cure him. The distracted wife, at her wits' end, has been inclined to grasp at every straw, but the letters have been turned over to Dr. Sawyer, who has naturally destroyed them.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The Speakership fight was somewhat cleared today by Representative Townsend, of Michigan, declaring to the members who approached him on the subject that he was not a candidate for Speaker.

Removes Poison Germs of Catarrh and Rheumatism From the Blood.

For catarrh of the head use a teaspoonful of salt and a quarter teaspoonful of borax dissolved in a pint of warm water. Snuff this mixture through the nostrils twice daily and immediate relief is experienced. To cure a catarrh of the throat, gargle with the same. Catarrh and rheumatism are both due to accumulated poisons in the system. These poisons ought to be eliminated through the skin, the bowels and the urinary tract.

The following simple home medicine removes the poisons from the blood, as it effectually acts on the kidneys, the bowels and the skin, causing them to resume their functions quickly and properly.

You can mix it at home or have any honest druggist do so. One-half ounce of fluid extract of Buchu, one ounce compound fluid Balmwort, and two ounces syrup Sarsaparilla, compound each meal and one at retiring. Mix and take a teaspoonful after dinner, and kidney trouble have already benefited by this treatment and the bowels when nearly everyone needs it.

is, provided he will give due deference to the desire to amend the rules, and I believe he will do so."

Notwithstanding this action on the part of Mr. Townsend, Representative Murdock of Kansas, was conferring with members, with a view to organizing opposition to the Speaker.

"At the proper time," Mr. Murdock held a conference, said Mr. Murdock. "The sentiment against Mr. Cannon is growing. We want to make sure that no 'Cannon man' is at our conference."

BIG APPLE SHOW OPENS

I. W. HILL, OF GREAT NORTHERN, IN CHARGE.

Many Railroad Men Among Visitors. Apple-Cooking School Feature of Fair.

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 7.—The first National Apple Show ever held in America was opened today by President Louis W. Hill, who is also president of the Great Northern Railway Company. The Governor Mead also addressed the large audience. President Hill predicted that within a quarter of a century the value of the apple crop of the Pacific Northwest will be greater than the present combined value of wheat, ore and timber.

Many railroad men are here, including G. W. Mott and Max Buss, general immigration agents respectively of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern; A. L. Craig, general passenger agent of the Great Northern, and William McMurray, general passenger agent of the Harriman lines.

One feature of the show is the presence of 16 young women from the domestic science class of the Washington State College at Pullman, who will demonstrate all this week in the cooking and serving of apples. They have recipes for 65 ways of cooking this one fruit.

The exposition is really National in its scope. Canada has many large and impressive exhibits, and Germany, Norway and Japan are also represented. All parts of the United States have exhibits. The South is represented by North Carolina, Georgia, Missouri and Arkansas, and other states represented are New York, Kansas, Indiana, Colorado, California, New Mexico and Oklahoma. British Columbia is here with 25 exhibits.

Japan Importing Active Cats.

Japan, it seems, is infested with rats, and the reason is explained by a Paris contemporary, viz. that the Japanese cats, which are not prolific, are pampered to an extraordinary degree. During the last few days, the chronicles proceed, a ship has left one of the principal German ports with 5000 cats on board. These, on arrival, are to be settled in the various maritime towns of the Mikado's dominions, and we further learn that the present consignment of cats is to be followed by four others, each of 5000. The name of the principal German port is not given.
