PENALTY IS MILD

Senate Will Not Try to Reprimand Roosevelt.

WILL HOLD UP MEASURE

Pet Projects of President Will Not Be Allowed to Get Past Upper House of Congress at This Session.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Dec. 27.—There is little suspicion that either branch of Congress is going to reprimand the President seriously for what he said in his annual message. There will be some caustic remarks. In the main they will come from Democratic Senators and will not take a form of legislative action.

But there is another way in which Congress can show its resentment without expressing it in words, and that course will be followed. President Roosevelt is very anxious, before he retires, to see a number of measures enacted into law. Congress will take particular pains to see that these pet measures are killed off.

Already the Senate has virtually served notice that it will not recognize the official standing of the Inland Waterways Commission or the Conservation Commission, nor will it make any appropriation for carrying on either work. Notice has already been served on the President that the postal savings bank bill cannot pass this session, notwithstanding the fact that the Republican platform pledged the party to its enactment. The parcels post bill will go down with the savings bank measure.

Later in the session Congress will take heathenish delight in refusing to make appropriation for the four battleships recommended by the President and it is more than likely that it will turn down the request for a material increase in the appropriation for the Forest Service. But for the attitude assumed by the President at the opening of Congress, some of these pet measures might be put through before the 4th of March, but it is a safe bet all will be defeated, if for no other reason but to deny the President that which he desires in a legislative way. And this is about as far as Congress will go toward "rebuking the President."
