FORAKER MAKES FIERCE ASSAUL

Accuses Roosevelt of Violating Law and Decency in the Brownsville Case.

Use of Spanish War Emergency Fund to Employ Detectives Hiegal-Shocking Offer of Inducements to Witnesses.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12—A spirited speech by Foraker of Ohio on the use of private detectives in investigating the Brownsville affair was the feature in the Senate today. Foraker had aside his manuscript several times during his address to inject remarks that were pointedly nimed at the President, although he refrained from the mention of Mr. Rooseveit's name. Evidently referring to the veit's name. Evidently referring to the President, he declared that men who made charges and insinuations would some time "be where they can be called

Lodge replied to Foraker's remarks, decharing that the use of the $2,000,000 fund appropriated in 1890 as an emergency war fund for the President during the Spanish War in the employment of the detectives on the Brownsville case was not in viola-tion of the law tion of the law.

Foraker endeavored to have a day fixed for voting on his bill for the re-enlistment of the discharged soldlers of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, but Warren, chairman of the committee on military affairs, insisted upon postponing such an agreement until a future day.

The discussion called out a large gathering that filled the galleries to overflowing and drew a considerable number of members of the House to the rear of the

Never Ashamed of Letter. -

When Foraker commented on a statement of the detectives respecting a let-ter he had written to one of the dis-charged soldiers, he laid down his manu-script and with considerable vehemence

"I have doubtless written some letters needing explanation; I have doubtnot have written if I had had all the Information I got at some other time. But I have never written any letters since I left my mother's knee of which I am ashamed or need any lying to As he proceeded his voice grew more and more intense.

"If I have shown any undue zeal in commenting on this proceeding," he said, glancing from his manuscript, "it is not through anger, But through that indignant resentment that every self-respecting man feels who is spied upon by the Government he is attempting to serve. No language can completely de-scribe such a shameful performance. don't exampt any one from that re-mark who is connected with it from the highest to the lowest."

ments.
"I wish," he said, his voice resounding throughout the chamber, "some-body else who prates about the dishoning the President) could be shocked and horrified."

Foraker read a number of affidavits by negro ex-soldiers whose confessions Browne had secured, all denying every statement of importance made by the detectives. He declared that use of detectives. He declared that use of part of the $3.000,000 Spanish war fund for the purpose of employing detectives was Hiegal and that no annual stemized report of the expenditure of this fund had been made, as the law required. Even granting that the expenditures were at lilegal on that ground, they were in flat violation of the law prohibiting the employment by the Government of employes of the Pinkerton and similar detective agencies. He went on to say:

cles. He went on to say:
"It is impossible to find language with which to fittingly characterize such a procedure as this detective business has been from its incipiency down to the sense of fairness, justice and even com-

Reward for Testimony.

He twitted the President with having employed detectives because as felt the employed detectives because he felt the necessity of bolstering up his case and was determined to do so. He demounced the method used to secure testimony, saying it could not be "fittingly charac" terized without the use of language which might appear disrespectful to the Chlef Executive." Worst of all, he had committed the serious offense of holding out an inducement or reward for giving testimony. He continued:

found in all the history of American criminal jurisprudence."
"Fraudulent impersonation, misrepresentation, lying, deceit, treachery, liquor and intoxication, coupled with promises of immunity and the excitement of hope and fear, and the effer of employment at remunerative wages, have been resorted to to secure the testimony sought for, and the so-called 'confessions' are not confined to such as affect the partles making them or to those affected by making them or to those affected by them who may be present when such con-fessions are made, but they extend also to those not present when they are made, and to those who were absent and with-out knowledge as to what is transpiring and without any opportunity whatever to be heard in their own defense, even to make an objection to such statements and such confessions as are untruthful.

These facts make all such testimony tterly incompetent and worthless."
The Senate adopted Foraker's resolu tion calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for an itemized statement of the expenditure of the $3,000,000 appropriated at the direction of the President as an emergency fund.
