"THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES" AT BUNGALOW. Larry Donovan.....Howard Russell Rev. Dr. Broderick.....James Gleason Gladys Olivia Armstrong.....

BY ARTHUR A. GREENE. HERE is enough excitement in that tremendously busy third act of "The House of a Thousand Candles," in which the Baker company opened yesterday afternoon, to stock a dozen high-class melodramas. There has not been anything of its kind seen here in months that can hold a candle to the interesting play in which candles play so important a part.

A series of exciting incidents follow in such rapid succession that one must witness to appreciate the situation. There is a scheming executor, an attractive girl, and a number of other characters all important to the plot. Sydney Ayres as young Glenarm, the properly named hero of the play, is a new member of the company. William V. Mong, makes his initial appearance in the "Strollers" role and started the Standard Theater, at First and Madison streets. His last theatrical venture was the management of the Theater Royal, that was located at Third and Alder streets.

married Joseph Ough, a prominent resident of Richmond, Cal. The groom is 39 and the bride is 66 years of age. The account of the wedding in a San Francisco paper says: "The groom had been married once before, and this is the bride's third advent into matrimony. Their latest romance began last year, when Ough, who was a pioneer wood and coal merchant of East Oakland, went to Oregon on a visit. While in that state he chanced to see Mrs. Foster.

It was a coincidence that she should later decide to make a visit to her sister, Mrs. J. A. Neill, of Richmond, wife of a well-known merchant. In the Contra Costa town the retired fuel dealer resumed his acquaintance with the Oregon lady. His wooing resulted in the trip to Oakland today and its denouement.

The bride blushing confessed that, although it was her third experience, the ceremony caused her a slight nervous spell. The couple will reside at the groom's home, 21 Ripley avenue, in Richmond.
