Fellow Class Member Compelled, to Do "Salome" Dance Before Sorority House-Portland Boy Said to Be Leader.

EUGENE, Or., Feb. 4 .- (Special.)-Finn Coovert, of Portland, a prominent fresh-man at the University of Oregon, has been suspended for the remainder of the semester, and five other freshmen allowed to remain in college pending good be-havior because of a recent hazing episode. This action was taken at a meeting of niversity faculty this afternoon A fellow-freshman was the victim of the hazing, and was forced to give a moonlight exhibition of the "salome" dance in front of one of the sorority

The faculty passed resolutions some-time ago to the effect that hazing in any form would be punished by imme-diate expulsion, and in carrying out this policy the student affairs committee of the faculty recommended expuision of all implicated; but on account of the possibility of the news of the resolutions having not reached these students, lenlency was shown in the case of Flagle, Brown, Randall, Roche and Blackman, who will remain on the college roll under probation.

Pedagogue Who Fled From Irate Women May Start Suit.

SALEM, Or., Feb. 4.—(Special.)—J. J. Clarke, the teacher who fled from Scotts Mills because of an attempt of trate women with horsewhips to repay him for an alleged beating of a young boy, finally appeared at Salem today, after being absent from his school sires Monday. sent from his school since Monday. He told County Superintendent W. M. Smith he would consult an attorney and take action of some kind against his alleged persecutors. He says he is ready to return to Scotts Mills and fulfil his contract as teacher.

It is said Clarke's action is upheld by the School Board at Scotts Mills, and this was reiterated by S. D. Adkins, prominent resident of Scotts Mills and candidate for Legislature last election. Clarke says he has been persecuted, and that at one time a certain element played Night-Riders and stoned his home. He says he whipped the boy who was responsible for the latest contention at the sanction of the School Board. The Board has decided to hold no more school for a week, and it is possible Clarke will return to his duties there next Monday.

He saturated his clothing with water and dashed into the cellar of his burning home here today, where the spaniel, having missed her three ten-day-old pupples, had returned to search for them. The dog was saved only after Venables had cut his way through a wait with an ax after his face and hands had been scorched. In the excitement attending the re-hands had been scorched.

In the excitement attending the removal of the household effects the fate of the mother spaniel was overlooked, as she had been foraging for food when the rescue of her black-haired pupples had been made. The fire had enveloped the entire two-story building when the cries of the mother spaniel were heard in the cellar. Answering whimpers came from the pupples which were held in the arms of Mrs. Venables, and at the latter's tearful request her athletiusband consented to try to save the more stringent measure. Convening at 10 o'clock this morning, the House remained in session until 10 o'clock tonight, with the exception of two recesses for meals, and did nothing but wrangle over the features of the bill. When adjournment was taken tonight only 18 of the 23 sections had been read and the fight will be resumed tomorrow morning. Opponents of the bill continually re-sorted to filibustering tactics, proposed frivolous amendments and interspersed the debate with motions to adjourn. The old trick of moving to lay an amendment SEATTLE, Wash, Feb. 4.—The last gap between Seattle and the summit of the Cascades on the Pacific Coast extension of the Chicago. Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway was closed yesterday, and the final spike was driven. The completed stretch of track, which marks one of the fastest feats of road building on record in the United States, leaves only two breaks to be filled, and has caused the officials to figure on trains running into Seattle by May, a month ahead of the time given out heretofore.

By using the tracks of the Columbia & Puget Sound Railroad from Maple Valley to this city, the St. Paul is now on the table, thus carrying the bill with it, was successfully carried out, but the local optionists awoke in time, defeated a motion to adjourn and lifted the bill again after two rolls had been called. Spectators on the floor of the House particiapted in the viva voce vote to lay on the table and wire warned to desist on penalty of clearing the floors of all Filibustering methods were adopted, even to the extent of demanding rollcall on amendments made by the "wets" and consented to by the "drys." The bill as it now stands has been amended in a few particulars consented to by the drys. The percentage of voters on a petition to bring about an election on the county unit, is retained.

The main feature,

The vote to resurrect the bill from the table displayed the actual strength of the "dry" combination, the vote standpect to employ 60 men before the end of the year. A crowd that packed the galleries was attracted to the House chamber this morning by the report that the local option bill would be sent back to the House by the judiciary committee for consideration, and it was not disap-pointed in its anticipation of a display of oratory. Applause frequently fol-lowed forensic flights, and the Speaker made little effort to control it.

The judiciary committee submitted a divided report. A majority of eight sent the McMasters bill to the House without recommendation, while five signed a minority report recommending a substitution of a bill providing for separate units in voting on the question establishing anti-saloon territory The substitute bill provided as one unit that portion of any county not included within incorporated cities, while each city was given the right to vote as one unit. Two members of the committee declined to sign either report.

Debate Lasts Until Noon

The debate over a motion by Beach, of Mason County, to adopt the minority report lasted until nearly noon, the participants frequently departing from the question at issue and going into the merits of the bills. The substitute bill was criticised as being inadequate in that it did not provide sufficient penal-ties for violations of the act and failed to control blind pigs or the sale of intoxicating liquors by unscrupulous druggists.

On the other hand, the advocates of the substitute bill contended that provi-sions of the McMasters bill were unfair, but that it was drawn in such form that reasonable amendments could not be adopted without reforming the whole act. It was declared to be impossible to amend it intelligently on the floor of

The vote on the motion to adopt the minority report was taken just before noon and resulted ayes 36, noes 58, the latter giving a fair indication of the strength in the House of the advocates of the McMasters bill.
