A reasonable indication of the desired popularity of the policies is that the management may be fairly credited to the number of policies which, in the course of a year, are simultaneously issued to one person than that in which other companies combined, for nine. It seems, therefore, that the company has been largely credited with the larger proportion of such policies than any other company in the business, and that it has been the best policy to have paid to its Policy-holders since organization, plus the amount invested and now on hand for their security

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company presents the following summary of its
