WANT DRAWS REGULATED.—The question of regulating the draws of bridges over the Willamette River is again being agitated. Joseph Buchtel started the movement and brought the matter before Captain Langiit three years ago. At that meeting many rivermen were present and as Mr. Buchtel was entirely alone on his side of the controversy. Captain Langiit remarked that the people of the East Side did not seem much interested or more would have turned out. nterested or more would have turned out That hearing was the only one the matter has ever had before representatives of the War Department, although committees have been appointed many times to take up the question. Statistics have been gathered to show that the traffic across the bridges for one day was the constant. the bridges for one day was greater than the traffic up and down the river for an entire year. Mr. Buchtel and others think that the draws may be regulated without obstructing navigation, by having them remain closed in the morning at noon and in the evening, at times when the great volume of travel crosses the bridges. This propsition will be submitted to the War Department.

SEWER MAPS ARE READY.-Maps show Sewer Maps Are Rhady.—Maps showing the Brocklyn sewer district have been prepared at the Auditor's office and the assessment on the property in the district is being made up. Owners of lots will soon know how much they have been taxed for this improvement. Already steps are being taken to lay the laterals. The Waverly-Richmond district is the first in with petitions for laterals which are to be laid in the center of the streets, the trenches to be cut with a sewer the trenches to be cut with a sewer digger. It is thought that it will cost much less to have the whole district provided with sewers under one contract it is also planned to have the streets im-proved with hard-surface pavement. In It is also planned to have the streets improved with hard-surface pavement. In order that property-owners may have clear understanding of the procedure necessary to secure laterals a special meeting of the Seventh Ward Improvement League will be held Thursday night. March 18, when the maps will be explained by a deputy from the Auditor's office.

PROGRESS ON BURNSIDE BRIDGE.—The span on the Burnside bridge damaged by the recent collision was raised yesterday to a level with the draw after great difficulty. A number of powerful hydraulic jacks were disabled, but finally enough power was applied to get the span back into place. The next job will be to move the pler which was forced over to the east three feet. The damage to the bridge was found to be more serious than was at first supposed. It is thought that the repairs can be completed this week and the bridge thrown open to the public. and the bridge thrown open to the public

BY ARTHUR A. GREENE THE inimitable Irish humor of Daniel Sully, a landmark in American theatricals, seemed as fresh and enlivening at the Baker yesterday afternoon as it did when Mr. Sully and all the rest of us were younger. "The Matchmaker" is the new vehicle which this famous comedian favorite with audiences which incline toward clean, wholesome comedy of which he has so long been an exponent.

"The Matchmaker" is a play of the West, its locale being Idaho. In the cast are typical "bad men" of the stereotyped character, city folks a long ways from home, prospectors, cowpunchers, halfbreeds, Army officers and all the types we meet on the frontier—the stage frontier. The star appears as a benevolent old village priest who has an attractive ward of the Miss type whose love inclines toward a young adventurer who is, of course, wrongfully accused of a crime. An amorous Army Colonel also figures largely in the scheme of things and because of his diplomatic services in bringing together these lovelorn couples.

heart affairs it would be hard to find. Mr. Sully's supporting company is quite sufficient to the demands in most in-stances. Julius Wright as Jim Carter, stances. Julius Wright as Jim Carter, the villainous ranchman, conclusively carries out the role. Margaret Manning, the heroine, is well portrayed by Eleanor Franklin; Kate Toncray makes a success of her efforts as "Silent Ann" the house-keeper, and Fred J. Harvey is convincing as the rascally halfbreed. Arnold Leslie. the hero mining-expert is entrusted to Joseph Lasher who would be much more acceptable if he could be persuaded to be less stagey. The scenic embellishments leave little to be desired and the at-traction is in the main quite worthy so eminent a star. It is worth a visit to the Baker just to hear Mr. Sully's brogue and to delight in his irrepressible Irish great loss in the value of their holdings. If an approach can be erected south from Holdady avenue it will save them from the threatened damage. This approach the threatened damage. This approach to be erected over the tracks of the Southern Pacific Railway Company. The city would probably have to bear the expense, as the Harriman lines are not interested. There is large investments at the foot of Holladay avenue, estimated as high as $500,000 which would suffer by removal of the bridge.
