Garrett McEnery, Woman's Attorney. Confirms Report She Is to Institute Proceedings to Break Noted Turfman's Will.

LOS ANGELES, March 14.-According to a morning newspaper ex-Governor Henry T. Gage admitted today that fice and W. I. Foley had been retained by the widow of the late E. J. Baldwin, to file a contest of her husband's will

SAN FRANCISCO, March 14.—That the widow of the late E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin will contest the will of the millionaire turfman was confirmed tonight by Garrett McEnery, her attorney. A member of his law firm left for Los Angeles tonight, presumably to institute proceedings there, on behalf of the widow.

Mrs. Baldwin, who was left only a third interest in the Baldwin property in this city, valued at $500,000, in the estate of her late husband, estimated at several million dollars, was not at home today and could not be located.

According to the provisions of the will,

According to the provisions of the will, Baldwin's two daughters, Clara Baldwin Stocker, of Arcadia, and Anita Mc-Laughroy, of Berkeley, receive the famous Baldwin ranch at Arcadia, which includes more than 2000 acres, valued at $1000 acres, valued at $1000 acres, valued at $1000 acres. $1000 an acre. The widow is willed an undivided one-third interest in certain property on Market street, known as the Baldwin Annex. Zelda Selby, a third daughter, residing in San Francisco, is bequeathed 290 acres of land in the Rancho del Puente, near Angeles. This property is valued of Zelda Selhy as a daughter of the fa-mous turfman. Mrs. Selby is a grand-daughter of ex-Sergeant of Police Abra-ham Sharpe, of San Francisco, but it is said her mother's name was Fowler, not Baldwin. Her grandfather was at the bedside of Baldwin when he died.

CAUGHT WITH PLUNDER

Louis Swartz Arrested at Vancouver for Robbery at Elma.

VANCOUVER, Wash., March 14 - (Special.) - Louis Swartz, 25 years old, was arrested in this city tonight for having in his possession a small telescope full of jewelry valued at several hundred dollars. The jewelry was stolen from a store in Elma, Wash, on the night of March 8 by two men whom Swartz says he met that evening.

Sheriff Ed Payette, of Elma, arrived this afternoon and conferred with the local police and Sheriff Sappington, and this afternoon and conferred with the local police and Sheriff Sappington, and this is the story Swartz told the officers:

"I was in Elma, having gone there in a bexear from Spekine. I was working my way to the Coast. I was working my way to the Coast. I was given the price of a meal, and after coming out of the restaurant was told by two men to hang around awhile. We went up to a store, and one of the fellows told me if I saw the Marshal coming to ask for a match. When I got back to the store the fellows were coming out with two suitcases and a telescope. They gave me the telescope and told me to go to Vancouver, and then to Portland, and meet them at the corner of Thick."

COLFAX, Wash., March 14.—(Special.)—Another hig railroad deal is on in Whitman County, the Northern Pacific Company having purchased right-of-way from Farmington to Freeze, Idahe. This right-of-way was owned by General T. R. Tanatt, of Whitman County, The company is said to have agents in the field to secure right-of-way from Freeze through the Lo Lo pass to Missoula. By this route the Western extension could be shortened 20 hours by missing the big loop by way of Lake Pend d'Oreille.

"They said they knew in Tacoma where they sell the stuff they had, and what I had they could get rid of in Portland. They had all kinds of watches, 20 new Colt's revolvers and much jewelry. They told me if I ever told anybody about their breaking into the store they desired me, and pulled their gun on me.

"The two fellows were about 22 to 25. The two fellows were about 23 to 25 years old. They had a bunch of all kinds of rallroad tickets and had a stamp to stamp the date on with, and always traveled on the cushions."

by the Baker Company. Both in point of performance and production it will be remembered as one of the notable events of the Bungalow season. The old play has not been seen here before in a number of years, not, if I remember correctly, since the late Louis Morrison, who was so long identified with it, appeared in his historic role of Mephisto, a short time before he died.

Manager Baker and Director Bowles undertook something more than usually ambitious, for it is a difficult play properly to interpret and one which presents exceptional obstacles in the staging. Its spectacular features might well intimi-exceptional obstacles in the staging. Its spectacular features might well intimidate a trained stage director, and for stock actors to get up in the lines within the few days permitted for rehearsal is a big task. You will agree after seeing it this week that those responsible for the splendid presentation deserve well at the hands of the public.

This is Mr. Ayres' second essay at the fascinating role of satan since the opening of the company's season. It will be remembered that he distinguished himself as the "devil" when that current sensaas the "devil" when that current sensa as the devil when that current sensa-tion was put on at the Bungalow shortly after its New York production. His Mephisto is, if anything, even a better personation than his portrayal of the devil in the more modern staging of that personage. Mr. Ayres does not follow slavishly the precedents set by Morrison, as do others who attempt the part. In as do others who attempt the part. In the main he is true to the traditions but he displays no small degree of originality in his treatment of it. In voice, figure and facial expression he appeals to the imaginative as just such a picturesque, sardonic embodiment of evil as the great German poet conceived. His work is cap-tral throughout ital throughout. No more appealing Marguerite than Miss Jewell offers could one rightfully expect. She is admirably adapted to the pathetic little peasant girl against whom the powers of darkness are arrayed. Her voice has the plaintive quality; her sup-ple youthfulness, physique and ability to portray emotions without undue theatricalism all combine to make this a per-formance that it is a delight to witness. The Faust of Donald Bowles was one of average excellence, although Mr. Bowles was inclined to rant at intervals. The foolish old coquette, Dame Martha, was well-nigh perfectly acted by Mina Crollus Gleason, while James Gleason, William Dills and Howard Russell in the minor roles did themselves credit. the minor roles did themselves credit.

ONE OF OUR SALESMEN

Was the First Purchaser of a Lot Yesterday in

WELLESLEY-ON-THE-HILL

TO sooner was our entire force of salesmen on the ground yesterday morning than one of them, after walking over the property, returned to the sales manager, "Pat" Lavey and said he was so delighted with WELLESLEY-ON-THE-HILL that he would buy a site for his own home at once. That was the beginning. All day long people patiently examined every nook and corner of the property. All day long they stood in line until the vast crowd could be attended to by the largest corps of salesmen that was ever gathered together in one organization. All day long they made their selections. All day long they kept an army of clerks busy entering sales. Truly, if ever there was an auspicious opening of a new and beautiful tract of homesite property, it was yesterday at WELLESLEY-ON-THE-HILL. Our sincere thanks are extended to the people and newspapers of Portland.
