Girl Vows Her Undying Love for Japanese Student and Cook, While Parent Admits Having Been Won Over Completely.

Miss Helen Gladys Emery, daughter of Miss Helen Gladys Emery, daughter of the Archdeacon of the Episcopal diocese of California, and victim of a mad in-fatuation for Gunjira Aoki, Japanese stu-dent and cook, spent exactly one hour and twenty-five minutes in Portland yes-terday forenoon, chaperoned by her mother. The couple took the first avail-able train for Tacoma, at which point they had arranged to meet Aoki and offect a marriage betwen the girl and offect a marriage betwen the girl and the Mongolian she has elected to marry. They learned while en route here from San Francisco on the Oregon express, that their welcome in Portland would be snything but cordial, and accordingly decided to remain here only long enough to make connections with the early train for Tacoma.

Acki, if he passed through Portland, managed to escape vigilance. Leave Train at East Side Station.

Forewarned that a gaping crowd awaited their advent at the Union depot, mother and daughter got off the Oregon express at the East Side station and evaded unpleasant incidents of any sort. Going to the Sargent Hotel, in East Port-Going to the Sargent Hotel, in East Portland, they remained long enough to remove the stains of travel and then drove about the city in an automobile until train time. The only persons who succeeded in locating them or with whom they spoke while in the city were newspaper men representing The Oregonian and the Evening Telegram. A coterie of reporters representing other publications were in waiting at both the East Side station and the Union depot, but they falled to make connections.

On reaching Portland the first information sought by Mies Emery and her mother was as to the time the first train would leave on the Northern Pacific for Tacoma. Seemingly they were in a great hurry, and although fatigued from the long ride from San Francisco, they refused to rest until the efternoon train, which leaves at 2 P. M.

Both talked freely of the affair that has aroused the interest and antipathy of the entire country. In fact, they spent nearly all the time they were in Portland talking with the newspaper men, who took them about the city in a closed automobile. Pausing at the northwest corner of Hoyt and Park streets, they posed for The Oregonian and Telegram photographers, and then driving to the Steel bridge entrance to the depot grounds, walked leisurely to their train and departed from the city without attracting the slightest attention.

Girl Determined to Wed Aoki

Girl Determined to Wed Aoki.

"I love Aoki, and he has proved that he loves me. He is a Japanese gentleman, and I intend to keep my promise to him," said Miss Emery, frankly.

"Yes, and no matter if the whole world protests, it cannot change my views one whit," broke in Mrs. Emery. "I was slow in making up my mind, but it is made up. I helieve my daughter is right and I shall stand by her. It is deplorable the way the public looks upon this affair, and we have suffered much. But persecution cannot shake me in countenancing what I believe to be right."

Mrs. Emery is a woman of distinguished appearance, tall, stately, of imposing presence, with gray heir.

"At first it nearly drove me, insune, this criticism, but as time passed by and I saw that my daughter really loved Aoki and that the world was against her, I felt myself compelled to take issue with her father and help her with my love and sympathy and advice in her hour of need," said Mrs. Emery.

Girl Seems Lacking in Character.

Girl Seems Lacking in Character.

Miss Emery plainly lacks her mother's character and mentality. She is neither comely nor decidedly bad looking. Her features are rogular, but not well-marked, the mouth is weak, eyes faded blue and lacking in luster, hair an undecided blonde, dress neat, but not becoming. She is slight, of medium height, wears spectacles, and while she is past 20, might pass for a girl of 18.

The bitter criticism that has been heaped upon her has not served to embitter Mrs. Emery. She says that she is misunderstood, and is inclined to talk more of the kindnesses that have been shown her and Miss Emery during the strange romance in which they are enmeshed. On the trip from San Francisco she says they met with no annoyances, and if the other passengers knew who they were, they did not show it by fill-bred staring. fill-bred staring.

Miss Emery told an Oregonian representative in detail of her meeting with Ackl and of their courtship. She lauded him as a Japanese student and a perfect gentleman, and said that while they were of different races there was not so much difference in tastes and views on various subjects as might seem possible. She denied indignantly that he was a menial and used to cook for the Emery family. "I first met him about 13 months ago," said she, "He came to our house but he didn't come as a cook. Being interested in Christian work and recognizing him as a deserving young student we invited him to remain with us, and at the same time he did such things about the house as he could without loss of dignity. "Some of our close friends must have spread the word around and then the papers got hold of it. All sorts of mean things were, said about me and about Ackl. At first I thought it would drive me mad, it was all so horrible. Just like some fearful nightmare. But I got used to it and mother has heiped me bear up under fhe burden. Yes, I loved Ackl and I was not willing to give him up. They tried every way to brand him, even offering him money to go away but he was not to be bought.

married I do not see why anyone should object," she concluded earnestly. "A Japanese gentleman is as good as anyone else. And just because there has been a lot of feeling against his people I don't see why that should influence me in the least."

Mrs. Emery concurred in what her daughter said. "I shall stand by my daughter said. "I shall stand by my daughter to the end," said she. "The public has been misinformed about Aoki. He is a fine Japanese gentleman and has proved himself such. He is finely educated and a Christian. He has acted honorably in the matter throughout. "Charge was made in a Japanese newspaper at San Francisco that Aoki had Fully 160 persons, who had gathered at the Union Depot to see the Emerys, were sadly disappointed. As the Oregon Express drew up at the depot there was a craning of necks. It was generally believed the Jap was with them and that they might seek a marriage license at the County Clerk's office. The train crew quickly gave out the news that the Emerys had alighted at the East Side station, getting off the car on the east side of the train. Some of the curious then headed for the East Side station, but of course arrived too late. It was by entering the depot grounds from the steel bridge entrance that, attention was escaped when they went to the Northern Pacific train bound for Tacoma. They took seats in a day coach and chatted with the newspaper men until the train pulled out. Before leaving both thanked the reporters for the assistance given them. Having been advised that Aoki was with the Emerys and that a demonstration might occur when the party arrived in the city, Japanese Consul Numano had a representative at the Union Depot yesterday morning to take observations. Nothing occurred, however, and according to the Consul the opposition to Aoki's marriage to Miss Emery is not being given official recognition, so far as he knows.

"Charge was made in a Japanese newspaper at San Francisco that Aoki had my daughter under a hypnotic spell. The article said she did not really care for him, but that he was using an occult force on her. It was to disprove that charge that Aoki gave her letters to him to the newspapers for publication. He made a mistake in doing that, but his motives were honorable.

"As my daughter said, he is a Japanese gentleman of the best type. He has been studying botany and insects for the University of Japan, of which he is a graduate. He has also written scientific articles for the best Japanese papers and thus has earned an income sufficient to keep him above the need of menial work. When the hubbub dies down I believe they will be happy together and that later a different view will be taken of the match."

I believe that when you are sure you are in the right, the thing to do is to go ahead, and keep at it even if it takes a thousand years. It is hard to do right, perhaps, but it is eraier in the end."

Here Miss Gladys broke in, in a wan voice, showing the strain she has been under for the past soveral days.

"Yes" she said, "It is better to do right even if it kills you."

Baby's Wailing Disturbs Girl.

Miss Emery was much disturbed by the Miss Emery was much disturbed by the constant wailing of a baby in the day coach, and often complained bitterly of it. Otherwise she was in as good spirits as could be expected, and tried to express an interest in the dull, swampy scenery that was in sight for the most of the journey. When the train reached Kalama, a Sheriff and ex-Sheriff were at the station, and made inquiries as to the whereabouts of the fleeing women. The conductor said he knew nofhing about them, and Miss Emery was much relieved and thanked that official warmly. Throughout the trip the party was given every consideration by the railroad authorities and at Tacoma many of the reporters of papers not credited with good standing were refused admission to the train.

Mrs. Emery Ruler of Party.

It was evident from the occurrences of the trip that Mrs. Emery was the ruler of the party. Grayhalred and stern of face, she ordered things in a tone that was not to be disobeyed. Her governorship of the party extended even to Miss Gladys' reading, and she forced the girl to read steadily from a book called "Little Flower of Jesus," a history of the life of a Carmelite nun. Miss Emery frequently expressed the opinion that the book was poor reading. After Archdeacon Emery joined the party at Tacoma, there was a spirited discussion in the Emery part of the car, and both Miss Gladys and the Archdeacon wept freely. Mrs. Emery, however, shows no sign of emotion. For reasons of her own, Mrs. Emery evidently desires the marriage to take place.

Aoki Resembles Spaniard.

Aoki, when seen on the train between Tacoma and Seattle, at first refused to talk, but he later admitted his identity, and said that he had once worked on a Japanese newspaper. He parried questions cleverly, and asked repeatedly for the cause of so much opposition to his marriage. He is a Japanese of more than ordinary fine appearance, resembling a Spaniard in looks, and speakes English fluently.

Miss Emery seemed to be a frail child, weak of volition and thoroughly in the power of her mother. When left alone and removed from her mother's watchful presence, she was willing to talk, but when her mother drew near retreated into a shyness that was invulnerable.

MILTON EXPECTS BIG CROP

January Freeze Did Little Damage to Peach and Cherry Trees.

MILTON, Or., March 21.—(Special.)—Orchardists are pruning and spraying their trees and vineyards in all parts of the Walla Walla Valley. Nover before in the history of this part of the Northwest has there appeared such a general interest in the culture of orchards and acre tracts as is evidenced on all sides this Spring. Trees that were considered of little value two or three years ago have been cared for until they are now capable of producing from $2 to $10 a tree annually.

Despite earlier and contradictory reports to the effect that the fruit crop in this part of the country was seriously injured by the severe cold spelling the early part of January, recent and careful examination has proven Strawberries and other small fruits are not believed to have been hurt by the low temperatures of the early winter, and expectations now are that one of the heaviest yields of this kind of fruit ever seen in this part of the past two months hundreds of acres of new land have been planted to orchards and small fruits and berries. Probably the variety which has been set out most generally is the apple, large tracts of which have been placed in the ground in many parts of the valley.

There seems to be a partiality to the winesap and Jonathan apple in chooseing varieties. This is done, it is thought, because of the especial adaptability of these trees to the soil in this vicinity. It is claimed by those who are in a position to know that the Walla Walla Valley has been termed by specialists who have examined conditions here and in other localities, to be the best adapted to the Winesap and Jonathan apple of any in the world.

There Is Only One Way

To Succeed in Business

Tell the absolute truth. Stick just as close to the facts as though you knew that one single deviation from them would lose the sale. Be just as square and honest as you know how to the people with whom you are in communication. Do not try to cover up defects, if there are any. The customer will think more of you if you tell them these things. Do not be afraid to let the man or woman with whom you are talking business look you square in the eye. Follow these little rules and you cannot help but get business.

It's the Jacobs-Stine Way

Do not get sore at what a knocker says. Let him go the limit, say all the mean things he can. Keep uppermost in mind the stability, integrity and honor of your own firm and the merits of your own property. Let your selling argument be a survival of the fittest. Honor wins in the long run.

is founded upon merit. The strongest argument in its favor is, let your customer see it. Let him realize that with one-half a million people in Portland in 1912, lots in WELLESLEY-ON-THE-HILL will be in demand at four times the price at which they can now be obtained. That much for investment. For the homeseeker WELLES-LEY-ON-THE-HILL is a good place to live. It has every feature that every other part of Portland has, and a great many more. Get ready to go out and see the property Sunday. Take an East Ankeny, Hyde Park car at the corner of Third and Yambill streets, ride to the end of the line, where automobiles will meet you and convey you to any part of WELLESLEY-ON-THE-HILL. Go out Sunday. Do not delay another minute after that day. The earlier in the day you visit the property the better opportunity for a firstclass selection. Later in the day the crowds become large and our salesmen cannot give you the attention they would like.
