protect her life and that of her daughter, Mrs. Amelia Wood, 60 years shot and dangerously wounded her -in-law, Jesse C. Moore, a druggist with a store at 262 Alder street, last night tween 10 and 11 o'clock, in the family riments in the Gladys Court, at 247 rd street. The shot was fired at Mr. e as he was making a brutal atack upon his wife, Mrs. Wood's daughand his mother-in-law, after he had ter, and his mother-in-law, after he had besten them both and abused them, according to the testimony of witnesses besides the two victims of his assault. The builtet entered his body through the back on the right side and penetrating the right lung, remained inside. Mr. Micore is in the Good Samaritan Hospital, awalting an operation for the removal of the builtet, and in a somewhat uncertain condition, as the surgeons were unable to judge of his condition accurately last night, as the wounded man was intoxicated. It is believed, however, that the wound will not prove fatal.

Mrs. Wood, who was first arrested by the police and taken to the police station charged with shooting her son-in-law, was later found to be suffering either a fractured skull or a depressed layer of bone in her head, the result of one of a shower of blows she received in the assault made on her. She is a patient in St. Vincent's Hospital in somewhat incertain condition. Mrs. Moore is at her apartment almost prostrated by the episode and grief-stricken because in the excitement which attended the removal of Mr. Moore to the hospital he had their 7-year-old son taken away with him in the carriage and his wife fears she will have trouble in regaining possession of the child.

The shooting was the sensational climax to a series of family troubles in session of the child.

The shooting was the sensational climax to a series of family troubles, in which charges of drunkenness and brutal treatment and even far more serious accusations figure against the husband. Although he was not arrested last night, information gained by the police from Mrs. Moore and her mother and other witnesses show that he had been guilty of the most cowardly conduct toward the two women and had been the aggressor in the assaults.

According to the stories told to the gressor in the assaults.

According to the stories told to the police and corroborated in part by neighbors of the two unfortunate women, Mr. Moore went home last night in a decidedly intoxicated condition. His wife had retired. He made her get up from hed and began to abuse her. The notse of the quarrel aroused Mrs. Wood, who was in another room in the same apartment, and she went to their room to beseech the husband to desist. When she opened the door Moore had hold of his wife and was striking her in the face. Upon the appeal of the white-haired mother the infuriated husband turned and striking her a terrific blow with his fist, felled her to the floor. He then turned again to beat his wife. She fied from him and he gave pursuit. As they passed out the door into the hallway of the apartment Mrs. Wood raised herself from her recumbent position and drawing a revolver which she had concealed in the folds.

the door into the hallway of the apartment Mrs. Wood raised herself from her recumbent position and drawing a revolver which she had concealed in the folds of her dressing gown, fired.

The screams of the women, the sound of the platol shot and the noises of the struggle aroused the other families living in the apartment building. O. L. Chapel, Mrs. W. L. McCabe, Mrs. Collins and Mrs. Hughes, neighboring tenants, rushed into the apartment. The first witnesses on the scene found that Moore had turned after Mrs. Wood had shot him and, returning to where she lay on the floor, began to beat her cruelly. Mrs. Moore, fearing that her life might be forfelt, fled to the safety of a nearby apartment and remained there until after the other tenants in the apartment—ouse had telephoned for the police and a doctor.

The Moores have been married about eight years. They met and were married in the home of Mrs. Wood, Austin, III.

They are now planning to build, a litch from this dam down into Mexico and back into California, which will interfere with our irrigation projects." said Mr. Harriman. "They say they arg going to spend $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 in doing this, but they might as well save their money. It may be somewhat inconvenient for us to do it, but, if they carry out their plan, we will build a high ditch line back of theirs and get water for irrigating our land in spite of them."

Mr. Harriman did not conceal the fact that he felt that the Southern Pacific had done great work in saving the Imperial Valley and the Government was acting unfairly in trying to take advantage of the dam for trrigating lands other than those through which the Southern Pacific ran.

"The Right of Way" NOME, Alaska, April 1 .- (Special.)-With a display of enthusiasm that would do credit to a Kentucky Derby, would do credit to a Kentucky Derby, the 14 dog teams entered in the All-Alaska sweepstakes were started today over the long course to Candie and return, a distance of 40 miles. Never before in the history of Alaska has so much enthusiasm been displayed in any sporting event as has been manifested in the sweepstakes. Court adjourned, stores and banks closed and operations in the mines were suspended for the day, so great is the excitement. Dog racing in Alaska was carried on up to last year only in a desultory manner and not until the formation of the Nome Kennel Club by a number of dog-fanciers, was there any great interest in the game which has now gained such a foothold that the sweep-stakes in Alaska today is the rival in interest among the Northerners of what the Kentucky derby was to the Kentuckians.

From Nome to Candle Creek and return is a distance of nearly 400 miles over snow and ice, over all kinds of different trails, along the coast, up and down rivers, across mountain ranges and over broad sweeps of tundera, through sweeps of timber from ocean to ocean. "The Right of Way" is a vital human document, dealing with life broadly; touching the heights and debths of love, ambition, endeavor, what you will that constitutes the relationship of society in its larger sense. ambition, endeavor, what you will that constitutes the relationship of society in its larger sense.

Eugene Presbrey, who dramatized the novel, has taken numerous liberties, for in the book Charlie Steel dies after having done many other interesting things which do not appear in the drama. Despite the fact that it is exceptionally well-acted, the play is like most book dramas, something of a disappointment. It is seidom, however, that we are privileged to witness the consummmate dissembling of two such fine artists as Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts in the same production. Standing's "Beauty" Steel is a master work of naturalism, particularly in the first act, in which he is at his best. Mr. Standing is a cordially remembered local favorite, having been leading man at the Baker during a memorable engagement five years ago. Since then he has not appeared here, but Portland has not lost interest in him.

He has developed wonderfully since his former engagement, although then recognized as an actor of unusual attainments. His work in "The Right of Way" has advanced him to the first rank among American leading men. As to Theodore Roberts, for years a foremost character actor, one of the three or four best in this country, his career during the past quarter of a century is a matter of dramatic history. He has appeared in Portland many times and has never disappointed the most exacting audience. His Joe Portugais is a wonderful study in character. In appearance, carriage, facial expression and reading of the lines he absolutely sinks his individuality into that of the French-Canadian riverman, whose doglike fidelity makes the part a conspicuous figure in current theatricals. His rendition of the patols is in itself an achievement of note. These two really sreat actors make NEED VINOL

These two really great actors make "The Right of Way." It is essentially a play in which men dominate and the women of the cast are given little to do. "Is it a fact that you are selling Oregon Wool Clothing?

Said One of Our Costumers

It is a fact. It is an important fact. We are offering you a firstclass, strongly-made, durable Oregon Wool Suit for $12.50

We wish here to repeat our former statement, that WE WILL REFUND ALL THE MONEY PAID ON A SUIT OF CLOTHES BOUGHT FROM US, MADE OF OREGON WOOL, THAT IS NOT THE BEST VALUE FOR THE PRICE EVER KNOWN IN THE NORTHWEST. We do not want you to be dissatisfied, and the strongest reason that we know why we engaged in the selling of Oregon wool clothing is the fact that we know you won't be dissatisfied. There's none better made anywhere at any price.

Special TOT Friday and Saturday In manufacturing our Oregon wool clothing we always have a large amount of remnants remaining. This material we have decided to make up into MAN-TAILORED CHILDREN'S SUITS. We have enough of these remnants on hand to make up about one hundred. We are going to offer them for Friday and Saturday only at the actual cost of material and labor to make them. These children's suits will undoubtedly be the best, most serviceable ever offered in the city of Portland at any price. The price at which we will sell them, however, is far below the ability of any other clothier to buy from the manufacturer. These prices range from
