WOMEN CLING TO GLOVES AND HOSE

Higher Tariff Will Not Leave Extremities Bare, so They Declare.

MUST BE CLOTHED ANYWAY

Portland Society Leaders Not Disposed to Follow Example of Chicago Clubwomen and Wear No Gloves and Stockings.

While Chicago clubwomen may protest and vow they will go without gloves and reduce their purchases of hosiery. Portland women, both leaders of society and members of the Portland Women's Club, believe that such tactics are quite unbefitting the Paoffic Northwest.

That the changes brought about will be largely of an individual nature, and that there will be no concerted action against the Payne tariff bill. which, by reason of certain of its pro-visions, causes a substantial increase visions, causes a substantial increase in many articles in which women are particularly interested, is believed. Although women's gloves and hosiery are the two articles of attire against which the strongest censure was passed in the Windy City, the hill proposes substantial increases in the tariff on tea, coffee and children's toys. The general opinion expressed was that in accordance with the general increased cost of living the rise in price of cofee and tea would not be especially noticed, and the question as to whether gloves and hosiery were to be classed as inxuries or necessaries would determine the manner in which the women of Portland would view the proposed increase in cost.

Prices Up, Stockings Down.

Prices Up, Stockings Down.

Prices Up, Stockings Down.

Some women said that the taxation of luxuries was the correct basis of taxation, and that this being the case women should view with equanimity any increased cost. "As my husband has to pay my bills I can't see why I am especially concerned." was the opinion of one woman, while another very firmly expressed the opinion that, "if the price goes up, the stockings will come down," thus gently hinting at a possible economical way of treating the matter.

Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway was confident that the increase would lead people back to old-fashioned times. "Our women will learn to darn their stockings." she said.

Most women scouted the idea that the Chicago ladies were serious in their vows to abandon gloves and stockings. "They say they will, and they may," commented one woman. "but so many people would be mistaking them for professional barefoot dancers that I think they would soon change their minds. Of course, Chicago women may be very strongminded, but I have never seen any of them very anxious to abandon gloves, even in hot weather, to say nothing of stockings. However high the price goes, I think Portland women will still wear stockings, and I expect to see them keep on wearing gloves."

That price is not the determining element with women's clothes was the opinion frequently expressed. "We want what we believe we require, and we are going to have it, whatever the price may be." was the somewhat emphatic statement of one of the best known local society women.

When it came to the question of tea, coffee and clothes, there were several evasive replies. One or two ladies hinted that they might purchase a cheaper article, and two advised The Oregonian reporter to consult their servants on the matter. "Really," said one lady, "my cook is so capable that she will be able to give you all you want. She does the buying, and if ten and coffee are increased in price I she will be able to give you all you want. She does the buying, and if ten and coffee are increased in price I suppose she will have to buy something else. And I don't think we are really tied to any one thing."

Mrs. H. W. Coe gave a thoughtful opinion. "There will be no difference in the sale." she commented. "Ladies in the sale," she commented. "Ladies must make their purchases, and al-though I have not especially studied the question. I do not believe women will see without the sale." will go without stockings and gloves Means Careful Purchases.

"With the poorer classes it may be somewhat harder, but I have always found conditions adjusted to the requirements. If the cost of living goes up, wages must increase. If wages should not be raised, the working classes may have to economize and wear fewer gloves, but I hardly think that will so without stockings."

wear fewer gloves, but I hardly think they will so without stockings."

Mrs. Warren E. Thomas derided the Chicago women for their purpose in appealing for a reduced tariff rate. "Chicago women may say that they will do without hoslery and gloves." she said, "but we certainly won't, and I don't thing Chicago women will either. I think people may curtail their purchases a little, but sooner or later they will be making just the same number of purchases as before. Women will pay just a little more and have the things just the same." Mrs. Thomas thought that she might change her opinion after giving the matter careful thought, but later in the day she confessed she had not changed her opinions in any degree.

As a careful thinker and speaker, Mrs. Duniway took time to consider

Mrs. Duniway took time to consider before she would deliver any opinion. Mrs. Duniway is a student of economics and took the economic line of argument. "Naturally, the increased cost ment. "Naturally, the increased cost will make us much more careful," she commented, "and we shall begin to darn our stockings as we used to do in the old days. Nowadays women are so busy bridge playing that they do not devote the time they should to daying the stockings at home. We not devote the time they should to darning the stockings at home. We all have a quantity of stockings put away, while they have been so cheap, and I expect that these will be brought out and repaired.

"Especially will this be the case with the children, and the new tariff may do good by bringing back our old-fashioned darning habit.

"Women are always ready to most fashioned darning habit.

"Wemen are always ready to meet any emergency, and perhaps the Government won't be any the gainer, for we can practice economy. As to other things, we shall just have to use common sense. Women have not been using common sense in the matter of gloves, and if the tariff brings that about it will have done well."

That some definite action will have to be taken as a protest, was the opinion of Mrs. A. C. Panton. Mrs. Panton said she felt society women would have to

she felt society women would have to make their action felt at Washington, and thought this might be undertaken by the women of the country on masse.

Gloves May Go but Hoslery, No.

"With Summer coming on, we shall be able to do without gloves as a starter," said this lady; "lots of people do so, and I see no reason why they should not. I hope that the habit of going without hosiery is not adopted—I should hate to think of any of my lady friends appearing in public without "them." and I know I never shall.

"If the bill passes and the price of tea and coffee rises much higher. I am confident that heaps of people will go in for cereal drinks. Many Californians do so at present, and I rather think we are likely to do the same, particularly as many people can't tell the difference between the cereals and the genuine article. You certainly can't if you eat at a restaurant. Before I should care to give a further opinion, I should like to have the opportunity to study the hill further. In view of its terrible provisions, I shall do this at once."

In view of its terrible provisions, I shall do this at once."

Mrs. John K Koilock deplored the proposed heavy increase in the cost of what amounts to necessities to women. "We certainly will have to do some medding or something," thought this popular young matron. "Prices are bad enough at present, and if it gets much worse we may certainly have to go without gloves—at least we may have to curtail our buying. If it gets much worse, we may even have to go without both gloves and stockings, but"—Mrs. Kollock stopped to think a moment—"I guess it can't get any worse, can it?" she queried. "We must have tea and coffee—I know I must—and whatever the price is, we shall just have to pay it."

"It seems to me." said Mrs. Frank B.

It seems to me," said Mrs. Frank I "It seems to me." said Mrs. Frank B. Riley, "that this possible increase will be a terrible thing for the working classes. They will just have to do without tea and coffee, I am afraid. As they do with few gloves and 'things' at present, they will just have to do without any—more or less. As society women, I don't believe we shall ever come to any extreme measures—for it would be for extreme measures—for it would be fear-fully extreme to go without one's stock-ings, don't you know. I am afraid we shall do just the same as we have al-

CEREMONY AT SITE OF JEFFER-SON HIGH TOMORROW.

New Building Will Be Ready Next Spring and Candidates for Principal Are in Field.

The laying of the cornerstone of the new Jefferson High School in North Albina will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The time was originally set for April 2, but, owing to the inability of some of the directors to attend, the formality was postponed. The programme is likely to be simple and be composed of brief addresses by Superintendent Frank Rigler and some of the members of the Board of Education. These details have not yet been arranged. Members of the Board say that the work on the new building is progressing rapidly and it is hoped to have the structure ready for occupancy by the opening of the Spring term in 1950. At that time it is expected the building will be no more than adequate to care for the rapidly-increasing school population of Portmore than anequate to care for the rap-ially-increasing school population of Port-land. The building will be Portland's third high school. Washington High School was completed and put in use only during the last school year, and is now crowde...

There are already several candidates for the position of principal of Jefferson High School. Among the possibilities are mentioned Hopkins Jenkins, principal of the Holladay School; P. A. Hayes, an instructor in Lincoln High School, and R. I. Steele, principal of Holman School. The probability, it is reported, is that Mr. Jenkins will be chosen principal. He is one of the best known educators in Portland and the State of Oregon and in Portland and the State of Oregon and in Portland and the State of Oregon and has been engaged in school work in this city for a number of years, Mr. Jenkins is a graduate of Yale, where he has also taken a post-graduate course.

Supreme Court.

The boundary controversy was decided once by the Supreme Court of the United States, but not to the satisfaction of the State of Washington. The latter succeeded in securing a rehearing, and an order was entered by the court about 20 days ago giving both states 40 days in which to submit additional testimony.

"It is possible," said Senator Stewart hast night, "that a conference held now, no matter how successful, would not save the two states much expense in the litigation pending, but I believe the visit will do good in a general way. Whatever the result of the suit, Washington and Oregon should come to a mutual understanding regarding control of the fisherles on the river and other matters that have been a source of trouble."

Governor Benson, at Salem, last evening

Governor Benson, at Salem, last evening ald that, while he understood the Washington authorities had been planning to call a conference on the boundary question, the matter had not yet been put up to him in any form. The original proposal of Senator Stewart, which was adopted by the Washington Legislature only, called for the appropriate of the state of the conference of the state of the stat called for the appointment of treaty com-missions by the two states, whose agree-ment should be ratified by each Legisla-ture before becoming effective. The reso-lution was transmitted to the Oregon Leg-islature, but reached there in the closing days of the session, and was not acted upon. On the day of the special session Sena tor Stewart went to Salem and endeav-ored to have the treaty resolution passed. It was first taken up in the Senate with the ald of Senator Bingham, but was killed because of the determination not to take up any new house take up any new business. The resolution thake up any new business. The resolution thereafter was presented in the House and was passed, but when sent over to the Senate was indefinitely postponed, on the same ground as earlier in the day. The proposal is now made by Washington that the authorities of the two states reach an amicable understanding, which, while not binding, could be used as the basis for definite action by the two Legislatures two years hence.

CHARTER IS GIVEN UP

PEOPLE'S FORUM DECIDES TIME IS TOO SHORT.

Measure Fathered by That Body Passes Away Among Its Friends.

Charter No. 3, which was to have been put before the voters in the June election, by initiative proceedings, passed away quietly last night. This charter has sometimes been referred to as the child of the Peoples' Forum but the Forum, while conceding that Charter No. 3 was a nice child, has refused to father it. Nevertheless the charter died in the home of its reputed progenitors in Selling-Hirsch hall.

The obituary was pronounced by Isaac Swett, one of the members of a committee that had the preparation of the charter in hand. This committee has been working assiduously for a week and had prepared a fairly of the property of the Last evening Mr. Swett announced at a sparsely attended meeting of the Forum, that the attempt to submit a charter that met the ideas of the Forum had been commenced too late. He said some of the attorneys who had offered their services in preparing the document had been called out of town and others had deserted the cause. Mr. Swett found that practically the entire legal responsibility of preparing the charter had devolved upon him.

He said he believed the general plan of the proposed charter was feasible, practicable and right, but that all the practicable and right, but that all the features desired could not be put in proper form without a great deal of study and consideration. He had found it impossible in the limited time available to do the work himself.

If the charter were now in complete form there would be but three days in which to secure about 3500 signatures in order to get the document before the people by initiative proceedings. The charter should have been in the hands of the printer Saturday. printer Saturday

GROUND IS BROKEN

Universalists Hold Services on New Church Site.

DR. M'GLAUFLIN SPEAKER

National Superintendent Explains Comments on Growth of Portland Congregation.

Ground was formally broken yesterday afternoon for the new edifice, which is to be built for the Universalist Church of Good Tidings, at Broadway and East Twenty-fourth street. As planned by the officers of the parish, the building will be of picturesque English design, which will harmonize with the surroundings. An ample inviting parish house will be connected for the use of the Sunday school and other branches of the congregational work. The church will be open for prayer and service every day of the week, according to the pastor, Dr. J. D. Corby. "Citizens who wish to meet to consider bettering their section of the city will find open doors to the new church," declared Dr. Corby yesterday. Club find open doors to the new church," de-ciared Dr. Corby yesterday. Club women and others who wish an invit-ing room for study and self-improvement will have every facility provided. A read-ing room and ilbrary is contemplated. The wholesome, healthful message of this church is thus applied to local needs and a valuable force added to the phi-anthropic agencies of the city." A large crowd was present to witness the ceremonies. Among those attending were many Universalists from nearby towns.

Briefly, the message of this church in the building of which you will co-operate shall be the gospel of good tidings, unrestricted and unabridged. It shall be a gospel for all the people, for all the time, and for all eternity. The ministry of this church shall be to the life at home. We have come to a section of the city where homes are rapidly multiplying; homes where little children are born and reared and trained; children that so soon will be ruling in the affairs of the world. It will be the endeavor of this church to help the parents deepen indelibly the lines that point in the direction of the dwine life. Just as the Athenian mother turned the face of her little one toward Olympus, that its first view might be of the dwelling place of the gods; just as Hannah brought her child to the temple and dedi-cated him to the Lord all the days of his life, so may mothers bring their little ones here for assistance in the instruction and the training in the nurture and the admoni-tion of the Lord.
