ROOSEVELT MEETS KING OF ITALIANS

Warmly Greeted by Victor, Who Thanks Him for Aid Given to Messina.

TRIP THROUGH RUINED CITY

Ex-President Aghast at Destruction Wrought by Earthquake - Is Cheered and Showered With Flowers by People.

MESSINA, April 6 .- Theodore Roos velt and King Victor Emmanuel met today on the Italian battleship Re Umberto in Messina harbor. The meeting was characterized by the utmost cordiality and the King expressed the gratitude of himself and the Italian people for the generous assistance of the United States to the earthquake sufferers.

of the United States to the earthquake sufferers.

At the close of the interview Mr. Rooseveit went ashore and inspected the rains of the city, the desolation of which moved him strongly. He then boarded the steamer Admiral, which, just at sunset, proceeded on her way to Mombasa.

The Admiral arrived at Messina at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and was saluted by the Re Umberto, with the King on board, who expected her in the morning. Almost immediately Captain Phister, the ex-Italian military attache at Washington, and now aid to Admiral Mirabello, was taken to the Admiral in a launch and inquired for Mr. Roosevelt. He said the King sent his compliments and would have great pleasure in receiving the ex-President of the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt's face lit up with a smile and, accompanied by his son, Kermit, and Ambassador Griscom, he went at once to the battleship. The King met the party at the head of the gangway and greeted the ex-President offusively, shaking him warmly by the hand. He did not wish, he said, to allow the opportunity to pass of making the personal acquaintance of so distinguished a man. Above all, he wanted personally to thank the ex-President for the help extended by America at the time of the carthquake.

"You are now able," he added, "to understand better what a terrible disaster it was."

Mr. Roosevelt thanked the sovereign for the compilment paid him in viting him aboard the Re Umberto. He said the American people did not wish thanks for what they had done, as they had merely tried to do their duty and knew no better way to confront the immense need than by their work and contributions.

Have Photographs Taken.

In the American quarter Mr. Roosevelt congratulated the American workers on the speed with which they had constructed the huts. He shook hands with the men from the American Navy who are directing the work, leaving them highly delighted.

Considerable trouble was experienced considerable trouble was experienced in making their way through the city, and rain, which began to fall, added greatly to the difficulties of the journey. In the but where the American workers to the but where the American of wine made their headquarters, a glass of wine was offered to Mr. Roosevelt, who, raising the glass, said:

The cx-President's departure from the city to so aboard his steamer was marked by scenes that moved him to emotion. Although it was raining heavily the people gathered in crowds. ing to one of the members of his Roosevelt said:

Party, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I am glad and proud, as an American clipse, that my country could do something to help after this immense distance, for which even all the assistance in the world would be insufficient."

Arising early this morning, Mr. Roosevelt was soon out or deck armed with a pair of marine glasses. The air was baliny and the supplies brilling.

balmy and the sunshine brilliant. After the buffeting the party had received on the buffeting the party had received on the voyage from Gibraltar to Naples the trip down the coast was like sailing on a lake. The whole morning was passed on deck, and Mr. Roosevelt had a good opportunity to learn much from those of the party who had been through the thrilling experience of the earthquake concerning the tragic details. He was especially interested in the stories told concerning the tragic details. He was especially interested in the stories told by Signor Trincher! the Frefect of Messina, who, under orders from Premier Gollitti, was to accompany Mr. Roosevelt on his inspection of the city. The Frefect, who was injured in the wreck of his own home, told of his son having been burled many hours under the ruins. He believed his son was dead, but eventually he was rescued. Such moments, Mr. Roosevelt sald, must age a man by 56 years.

About 11 o'clock the Admiral passed close to the Lipari Islands, the volcano Stromboli, which the ancients regard-ed as the seat of Acolus, the god of the ed as the seat of Acolus, the god of the winds, standing up hugely against the blue of the sky. From the cone of the volcane, thore than 1000 feet high, a column of smoke arose majestically, and was swept far away in filecy clouds. The village of Stromboli, all blue like a Moorish town law low rushed on deck again, so that they might not lose the view at the entrance of Messina harbor. All that was left of the population of that once busy city gathered early near the landing place to wkiness the arrival.

As the Admiral approached the shore the ex-President made exactly the same remark as hundreds of others who have visited the ruins and observed them from afar:

When, however, he saw behind those shells of what once were walls of splendid palaces, he was aghast, saying that it was impossible to form any idea of the completeness of the disaster without ocular demonstration.

City Revives Among Ruins.

There have been many changes in Messing since the early days just after the earthquake. All along the sea front now huts, tents and makeshifts of various kinds have been erected. There is a cer tain noise and bustle, showing the city is resuming some of its former activity. Very small shops are tucked away in doorways or in an isolated room left here and there in the general destruction. Nu-merous craft were to be noticed in the harbor, from battleships to fruit schoonnarbor, from battleships to fruit schooners.

Mr. Roosevelt and his party explored the inner part of the town, now a desert waste, practically composed of a gigantic rubbish heap. Great blocks of stone and ancient columns lay scattered among the rubbish where dangerous walls had been pulled down. The line of the streets was preserved only by tracks worn by the civilian survivors, the soldiers and the visitors. It seemed impossible that anyone should live in such a wilderness of ruins.

Mr. Roosevelt was strangely moved by the pitiful spectacle of a city destroyed, and on the way back he spoke sympa-thetically of the sufferings of the Sici-ians and of the mysterious influence that held them to their devastated country. Arrived again in the populated quarters, it seemed as though the people were not so uphappy after all. They showed a certain serene contentment, and everycertain serene contentment, and every-where Mr. Roosevelt was greeted with enthusiasm.

The scene about the harbor front was characteristic. The handsome Sicilian women, with their beautiful, half-naked children, appeared in their bright colors. The men of the Arab type were just as attractive in their own way. But in another sense the spectacle was touching, for here was a people, suddenly overwhelmed, atruggling for existence but refusing to leave the land from sheer love of home. The crowds followed the American party wherever it went, cheering frequently and shouting. "Viva America, viva Roosevelt."

Acclaimed by Populace.

Mr. Roosevelt lifted his hat repeatedly

Mr. Roosevelt lifted his hat repeatedly, copping sometimes to shake hands with the children. He left an impression on the people which never will be forgotten, of a strong man whose deepest sympathies have gone out to them. The people were still acciaiming the ex-President as he clambered aboard his steamer.

As the Admiral sailed slowly out of the port it was seen that King Victor Emmanuel was standing on the bridge of the Re Umberto. The battleship sulted the departing guest and the King waved his nand, while the ex-President replied with a waving of his hat.

Although somewhat worn from his fatiguing excursion ashore, Mr. Roosevelt said that he was exceedingly happy at his meeting the King. What he had seen in Messina, he continued, would leave a lasting impression. After a short rest he donned evening dress and went to dinner, still having before him the flowers sent by Emperior William.

Talks of Johnston Letter.

The conversation then turned to the hunting trip to Africa, the King saying that his tastes also ran in that direction. He mentioned the expedition of the Count of Turin in Africa, and hoped Mr. Roosevelt would meet the Count there. After more than haif an hour's conversation the King accompanied his guests ashore, where a photograph was made of a group consisting of the King, Mr. Roosevelt, Kermit and Mr. Griscom. At the suggestion of the King, Mr. Roosevelt, Kermit and Mr. Griscom.

Before leaving, the King wished Mr. Roosevelt a happy and successful trip and much goed luck in hunting. He asked Mr. Roosevelt to promise that he would visit Rome on his return, when the Queen would be pleased to meet him. The King then left, not wishing to accompany the party over the ruins.

Mr. Roosevelt was charmed with the courtesy of the King and declared it was the most interesting half hour he had spent since he left the United States.

John G. Millburn Tells Federal Court That Trust Is Aid to Progress.

KELLOGG SCORES METHODS

Government's Suit to Dissolve Parent Company Progresses Rapidly Before St. Louis Court, Defense Starting.

ST. LOUIS, April 6.- John G. Milburn, of New York, the Standard Oil Com-pany's chief counsel of record, com-menced late today to present the de-fense's side of the case in the Gov-ernment suit to dissolve the Standard Oil ernment suit to dissolve the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey for alleged violation of the Sherman act.

Although Mr. Milburn addressed the court but 40 minutes, he found time to tell much of the early history of the Standard Oil Corporation. The principal points made by Mr. Milburn were that the corporation had done much for American industries and commerce, and that the oil business of the early days was of "nondescript type."

Millburn Is Eloquent.

"Wherever," said he, "has trod the foot of civilized man; wherever the hoof of the camel has made its imprint upon the sands of the desert, or wherever an artificial light is burned and wherever flies the flag of any nation—there will be found the product of Standard Oil—the product of America and Americans."

The Federal attorney, Mr. Kellogg, concluded his opening address for the Government shortly after noon and then C. B. Morrison, Mr. Kellogg's chief associate, finished the Government's opening of the argument in a two hours' discussion of alleged unfair competition, scoring the Standard heavily. "Wherever," said he, "has trod the foot

Original Concerns Competed.

The crux of Mr. Kellogg's argument today was that the original 20 companies involved in the trust agreement of 1879 and 1882 were at that time non-competitive and illegal under the then existing common law. The trust was, therefore, void. The same conspiracy to monopolize and restrain commone had existed continuously commerce had existed continuously until the present day, bringing the defendants well within the purview of the existing Sherman law, he inment.

Judge Hook interrupted to ask the Federal lawyer if one person, without a corporation, could offend under section 2 of the Sherman law.
Mr. Kellogg said an individual could, "If we can stretch human imagination far enough to conceive an individual's accomplishing the mo..opoly."
Anticipating the argument of the defense, Mr. Kellogg told the court its attorneys would not deny but that the original trust agreement was void under the Sherman act, as well as under the common law.

Defense Is Anticipated.

"The company will claim probably," said the attorney, "that it is no longer receiving discriminatory rates, that it has ceased to employ secret and predatory companies in competition and that it no longer engages in unfair competition. Why? Because it had to "This court has the power," Mr. Kellogg said, "to prohibit the commerce of these defendants between states as long as they continue to offend."

"If these monopolles are permitted to exist unchecked," declared Special United States Attorney-General Frank B. Kellogg, "your children and mine will be mere employes of corporations and all further initiative of enterprise will cease. History has shown that when unchecked by court or legislation, monopolies have been stopped by revolution."

revolution."
Ex-United States Attorney Morrison, of Chicago, who is Mr. Kellogg's assistant, described in detail first the defense's marketing methods and the manner in which it secured records of its competitors' business through sulfared secret agreements with emalleged secret agreements with em-ployes throughout the country. It is now understood the lawyers for the defense have promised the court to finish their case Saturday.

Methods of Prosecutor Rush Attacked in Scheme to Prove In.-

TULSA, Okia., April 6.—In the trial of Governor C. N. Haskell for alleged land fraud, testimony designed to uphold charges of improper conduct by Special Prosecutor Rush in securing the indictments was completed today. The defense immediately resumed argument on the motion to quash the indictments. Arguments were in progress when court adjourned, and will be taken up again at 10 o'clock in the morning. An early decision is expected.

If the court overrules the motion to quash, attorneys for Haskell will file a demurrer. If that fails the case will be assigned for immediate trial by Judge Marshall.

E. B. Linnin, special officer of the Interior Department, was an important witness today. He testified that he was appointed December 2, 1908, to investigate the town lot fraud cases in Muskogee. He took statements, he said, in Michigan, Okiahoma, Louisiana, Indiana, Mississippi and Ohlo. These form the basis for the Haskell prosecution.

R. H. Taylor, another special officer, now in California, was not able to reach here. Both sides agreed that his testimony was not essential, as he would testify the same as Linnin.

Edward Shannahan, of Vinita, foreman of the grand jury which indicted Haskell, was the last witness of the day. He related the statement alleged to have been made by Prosecutor Rush. These were designed by the defense to uphold charges of improper conduct, made against Rush regarding the grand jury proceedings.
