EX-POLICEMAN IS CALLED

Samuel A. Jameson Passes Away After Lingering Illness.

Ex-Policeman Samuel A. Jameson died Thursday night at his home, 534 Grand avenue south, after a lingering illness of over one year of heart trouble. Mr. Jameson was born in Iowa 45 years ago and came to Portland 20 years ago. For a time he was employed at the Immanuel A. Jameson, Ex-Policeman, Who Died Yesterday.

Poulsen Company's sawmill plant as a millwright. Six years ago he received an appointment to the Portland police force and served in that capacity four years, making a excellent record. He resigned, leaving the department with the respect of his brother officers and the public with whom he came in contact.

He is survived by his wife and the following children: Mrs. Ray, Guy and Olive Jameson, all of Portland. The funeral will be conducted from Dunning's undertaking chapel, 414 East 9th street, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

SAYS BIRDS CAN REASON

W. L. Finley Believes They Display More Than Instinct.

That many varieties of birds what amounts to something more than instinct, which is, in reality, the power of reasoning, was the statement made by W. L. Finley, lecturer before the Woman's Club yesterday afternoon. Mr. Finley was particularly at home with his subject. With the beauty of his stereoscopic views, no less than by his vivid power of description, the lecturer held his audience. He laid particular stress on the cruelty of caging animals and birds.

Mr. Finley described the gull as being the bird possessed of most brain sense or power of reasoning, although he admitted that the blackbird ran very close for second place.

"Some actual natural history has been described as fiction," said the naturalist. "How else can we interpret the actions of animals and birds observed in the field than by putting it down to actual brain use? If we believe in evolution at all, we must believe in the development of brain matter in the birds of the field."

Showing the sense displayed by the gulls in staying close to rock similiar to their own coloring was the theme of the illustrations. The lecturer proceeded to discuss the cruelty of keeping performing animals. He said: "Such performances are blows upon our humane education. They educate our children in cruelty, and they are not even interesting."

Mrs. Abigail Scott Dunway proposed a vote of thanks to the speaker, suggesting that as he had such a thorough knowledge of the flight of birds he should be invited to discourse before the Wright Brothers and other exponents of aerial navigation.

DR. BROUGHER ON "HEADS"

Sermon Tomorrow Will Deal With "Doubts and Doubters."

Dr. J. Whitcomb Broucher is preaching a double series of sermons at the White Temple that are of unusual interest. The morning series deals with "The Body's Interpretation of the Soul." Last Sunday morning he spoke on "The Heart in Religion" and tomorrow morning his subject will be "Heads." He will deal with "Doubts and Doubters." He will answer the question "Is Christianity reasonable?" Miss Ethel Shea will sing a solo, accompanied by a violin obligato by Mrs. Corbetta Barker. Two unusually interesting telegrams from the East will be read to the congregation.

At night Dr. Broucher will continue his series on sermons on "Respectable Sins." His special subject will be "Temper and Tongue—How to Control Them." Keep Sweet. The Sunday nights following he will deal with "Jealousy" and "Vanity." The service will be special with baptism and there will be special congregational singing at the White Temple, an unusually attractive feature, while the gospel selections sung by Mrs. Kathleen Lawler and Miss Ethel Shea always prove a delightful part of the service.

HEAVY STRAIN ENDS

Chinatown's Interest Tense in Yee's Murder Trial.

Lines are closely drawn Members of Bo On Tong and Those of Opposing Faction Attend Court Each Day, All Decked in Their Finest Garments.

There was a marked cessation in business circles in the Chinese district while Yee Gueng was on trial in the Circuit Court for the killing of Lee Dai Hoi in his shop at Fourth and Pine streets in March, 1908. Commerce was forgotten by the merchants, who congregated in the courtroom and eagerly drank in the evidence which was given out piecemeal to the jury through an interpreter.

Second Oriental inhabitants of Oak and Grand streets amid the various other thoroughfares in which the Chinese abide discarded their shop clothes and each day, dressed in their best, the factions attempted to outdo one another in appearance, as well as in sentiment. And all or nearly all of this feeling comes by reason of the existence of the Bo On Tong, "The Society for the Protection of Peace," made up of the immigrated natives of Kong Chow, a district of China which is not far from the City of Canton. All of the members come from that section. In fact, it was there that the Tong On Society was given a life, and an organization once born in the Celestial Empire never dies out. It is an endless and as absolute as the Chinaman himself, who, though ignorant of his own race, has a practically infinite reserve of human beings of the same type and stamp to draw from.

Tong Has Considered Case. The Bo On Tong has had meetings at 65 Second street, and there frequently, since the shooting of Lee Dai Hoi, sessions have been held at which the murder and again in heated terms, all those engaged in the conversation using the Cantonese dialect.

In general a denial is made by the opposing factions that a conspiracy was formed for the purpose of destroying Lee, who upholds Yee Gueng's claim that he is not only innocent of the crime charged, but that also the murdered man brought on his end by repeated acts of misconduct. They say that there was no plan of murder drawn up by the Bo On Tong, but that it will be found Hoi was killed after a wordy dispute over a money matter.

The heads of the two factions are Jew Guy, of 370 East Oak street, and Ching Hong, of 245 Oak street. Jew Guy is not a declarer, a member of any tong and says that he has not been affiliated with the Bo On Society.

"I do not belong to the tong," he said yesterday, "and it is foolish to say that he was killed in a plot. Ching Hong's statement to the contrary, asserting that Guy once occupied the office of president of the organization."

Plot Hatched in South. "The trouble that caused the death of Lee, who was my friend," he said, "was all hatched out in San Francisco, where the Bo On has about 700 members. I was to be one of the three who were to be killed and I was to be paid to take my life, but I was not in the way when those selected to kill me came around."

Although Ching is positive that there was a conspiracy and although he says he was a victim, he is at a loss to explain why the Bo On Tong should set out to kill anyone.

"Maybe they know in San Francisco," he suggested, "and I believe they do. There is no thing sure, and that is, there is no money now in the treasury of the organization which was formed for the purpose of aiding Chinamen in distress and helping the aged of our race."

"Cousins' Swarm Around. The money used to defend Yee, who is a friend of Jew Guy, came from members of the tong both locally and in San Francisco. He had also about him a swarm of 'cousins,' so called because they had the surname of Gueng, although one may never have met the other before, or even heard of him. A law which admits of no breach without punishment is that Lee can never marry one by that name, no matter from what part of China he or she comes, because if the records were followed back, perhaps 100 or more years, it would be determined that the two were cousins. This rule holds good with all other surnames and is supposed to have been based upon hygienic principles.

While the feeling thus ran high in the Chinese quarters and in the courtroom here, it is said to have been equally warm in San Francisco, where the progress of the trial was noted day by day through the dispatches and the newspapers. The Guengs, or "cousins," of Yee are said to be very numerous there and to be being informed promptly on the proceedings. Locally the prayers for the spirit of the murdered man go up from Ching Hong and his faction, while Jew Guy and his coterie are equally zealous about the welfare of Yee Gueng.

WILL RECLAIM BIG TRACT

La Grande Men Have Project to Irrigate 40,000 Acres.

An irrigation project of great importance to Eastern Oregon is being promoted by leading business men of La Grande which, if carried to completion, will bring 40,000 acres of land under irrigation. It is said that the land which they seek to water is already worth $75 an acre and its cost, when the ditches are completed, can only be estimated, but is certain to be very high. Walter P. Jones, John Collier, Mac Wood, Fred L. Meyers and W. A. Bohnekamp, all of La Grande, are now in Portland working on the scheme, with good prospects of financing it.

The plan is to store the waters of Meadow and McCoy creeks at a point 15 miles above La Grande by means of a dam 100 feet in height. The watershed drained represents 155 square miles and the bed of the Grand Ronde River will be used as a great irrigation canal for 16 miles. The plan contemplates the expenditure of $500,000 and a large number of farmers and business men of La Grande and vicinity are willing to invest. They mean to carry out an immense diversified farming scheme, laying out the land in small tracts. Practically all the money necessary is already assured and the gentlemen named are here making final arrangements.

The corporation will be known as the Grand Ronde Reservoir Company and will be finally organized at La Grande on April 28. Great enthusiasm is being manifested among the people of the La Grande section and the success of the project seems assured.
