

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Wash-ington, June 7.--Unloss there is a change of programme, F. H. Newell will retire from the office of Director of the United States Reclamation Ser-vice some time during the coming Fall, probably to be succeeded by someone not now in the Government service. Who that man will be has not yet been determined, but the indications are that he will, in addition to an engi-neering education, have a comprehen-sive knowledge of the law. Mr. Newell, unless he so desires, will not sever his connection with the Reclamation Ser-vice, but will be retained as an engi-neer-probably a general consulting engineer. OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Wash-angineer. About the time there was a change of administration it was learned that certain Western Senators were anx-tous to secure the removal of Mr. New-ell from office. That effort failed. The agitation those Senators started was of short duration. In time it completely died out of short duration. In time it completely died out. But it develops that Secretary Ball-inger is not altogether satisfied with the way the Reclamation Service has been conducted. While he finds no evi-dence of corruption or crookedness, no yielding to political influence, no flag-rant mal-administration, he finds more or less dissatisfaction, some little fric-tion, and what he is inclined to regard as looseness.

Defects in Administration.

The situation, in brief, is this: While Mr. Ballinger finds no fault with the engineering work of Mr. Nowell, but has respect for his ability as an en-fineer, he inclines strongly to the opin-ion that he can find a more satisfact-ory administrative officer to take gen-oral supervision of the Reclamation Service—to become its business mana-ret. So to speak the proceedings of the ger, so to speak. He recognizes that Mr. Newell's abilities lie along the lines of engineering rather than ad-ministration, and that fact inclines him so to speak. ministration, and that fact inclines him to the opinion that a change should be made. By retaining Mr. Newell as an engineer officer, he can save to the Reelamation Service the valuable ad-vice of the present director on all prob-lems affecting construction, while by appointing a new director he believes he can overcome those unsatisfactory features of administration which he ar Ballinger is not ready to recom-nd a change at the present time, for desires to get more detailed infor-MT he desires to get more detailed infor-mation before taking such a radical step. During the Summer the Secre-tary will go personally upon a number of Government irrigation projects, es-pecially those that have given rise to trouble. On the ground he will find out for bimself what has led to unsat-isfactory conditions and who is to binme. If his investigation fails to bear out his present impressions and if he finds that no fault attaches to Mr. Newell as director, he may alter his tion Service since he became Secretary of the Interior. As a Government ma-chine, that service is not running as smoothly as might be desired; there is not entire harmony between the servis not entire harmony between the serv-lee and the present head of the Interior Department. On many details of ad-ministration the Rechamation Service, under previous secretaries, has followed a pollcy that does not meet with the approval of Mr. Ballinger. He insists that his ideas be followed by all branches of his department.

Ballinger Boss Over Bureau.

Mr. Newell has not worked at cross-purposes with Mr. Bailinger, but rather at his direction. Nevertheless there is not that same bond between the servnot that same bond between the serv-ice and the present Secretary that was noted between the service and Secre-tary Garfield. Under Mr. Garfield the Reclamation Service took the lead, and the Secretary approved; now the Secre-tary takes the load, and the service must follow his directions. Gifford Pinchot, head of the Forest Service, through his intimate relations with President Roosevelt, was able to assist Mr. Newell in the old days. President Roosevelt was an entimesiast over Irri-Mr. Newell in the old days. Fresident Roosevelt was an enthusiast over irri-gation; he had confidence in Mr. Newell, doubly so because Mr. Pinchot vouched for Mr. Newell. It was in a large de-gree because of this fact that the Re-clamation Service was an almost inde-pendent bureau up to the time the Taft Administration opened.

Administration opened. But President Taft is not a believer in independent bureaus. He holds each Cabinet officer responsible for the con-duct of all bureaus in his department. duct of all bureaus in his department, it was so in the Department of Com-merce and Labor, when he forced the director of the census to resign because that director was not working along lines satisfactory to his superior, the Secretary. So it will be in the Recla-mendes a change. Heretofore a thorough and practical knowledge of engineering was consid-ored the first requirement of the head of the Reclamation Service. But from present indications it would seem that business and executive ability, com-business and executive ability, com-mingled with a practical knowledge of the law, is regarded as more important than capacity as an engineer.
