

GALLAGHER POINT OF BITTER ATTACK

Attorney Moore, of Calhoun Defense, Plays ex-Supervisor Mercilessly.

LONG TRIAL NEAR CLIMAX

Masterly Review of Trial Given in Closing Argument That is Filled With Bursts of Oratory and Sarcasm.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—With men and women scrambling and wrangling for standing room in the courtroom, Patrick Calhoun's explanation of the bribery incident against him practically was substituted to the jury tonight when A. A. Moore, senior of the six counsel for the president of the United Railroads, promised to submit his case during the first hour of tomorrow's session.

As the five months' trial approaches its climax, dormant public interest is awakening to the point of eager demonstration, and the behavior of the public at Carpenters Hall today sorely taxed the patience of the dozen policemen stationed at the courtroom's entrance. A still greater crush was expected tomorrow, when Mr. Moore concludes his address and the last of the arguments that have now occupied full three days will be concluded.

Fine Review of Case.

Mr. Moore's argument, which has already lasted eight hours, was pronounced tonight by adherents of each side a masterly review of the case. His power of denunciation, his sarcasm, and his flights into classical rhetoric, evoked frequent murmurs of appreciation or laughter from the audience, and while the speaker openly confessed the weariness his hearers felt at the close of the long day, the attendance had not diminished when the hour of adjournment arrived.

Patrick Calhoun, whose wife, daughters and sons were present throughout Mr. Moore's address, relaxed his solemn deportment of his late classical recitations and laughed openly at some of the speaker's metaphors. His friends, business associates and the friends of his attorneys, pressed him into the foreground throughout the day he never ceased to observe the jurors and take full note of the scenes in the crowded sections behind him.

Sarcasm for Immunity.

Mr. Moore referred to the immunity granted the superior-witnesses as "a strange and sad story. When we look for a reason explaining the strange artificiality of this transaction," he continued, "it seems that these men were taken into the fold of Sprechel—wings of the graft prosecution—whatever that grisly horror may be."

Gallagher and Nicholas were both wearing for their necks. There was a kind of bastard immunity given them—legal, that nearly approached bribery itself."

At the time of adjournment Mr. Moore had attacked every vital feature of the prosecution's argument, paying particular attention to alleged discrepancies in the testimony of the Supervisors, to the allegations of Joseph Sprechel, and to a rival street railway system and to the activities of private agents of the prosecution.

No Mercy for Gallagher.

Mr. Moore was particularly severe in his denunciation of James L. Gallagher, head of the supervisors. "The top of his head does not emerge from the pit of corruption he has dug for himself. If you knew a man who had advised a witness to perjure, his confederates into jail, would you return a dog to the pound on his testimony" or would you deprive a man of his liberty and honor on the same authority?"

Mr. Moore, declaring that hundreds of innocent lives were taken in the French revolution upon the perjured statements of informers, and graphically described the scenes in Paris during the reign of terror said:

"And the knitters, poor misguided women, actuated by the highest of patriotism, and by the guillotine and knitted as the blood dripped from the boards. And they knitted when Madame Roland, a noble patriot, raised her white arms as she ascended the block and said, 'O Liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name.'"

As he spoke, Mr. Moore turned from the jury and directed his gaze to the long rows of men seated at the desks where were seated a score of women wearing tiny American flags, emblems of the Citizens' League of Justice, an organization friendly to the prosecution.

Women Grow Restless.

The tense silence was broken by a rustle in the foremost rows, but there were no other stirrings in the power plant address, except an occasional murmur or laughter at one of the speaker's references, instantly shut off by the sharp rap of the bailiff's gavel.

Mr. Moore paid considerable attention to the testimony of John H. Helms and Nicholas Korngold, detective for the prosecution. "Helms," he said, "is one of the soldiers of fortune who incidentally served at the same time under two flags, and took money from both sides. We are told he was decorated by the Czar of Russia—I surmise for some magnificent gunnery work in the land of spades. I pause here to say this case has been characterized all along its tortuous way by the sting of traps. As Jeremiah said, 'They lie in wait as for a bird, and they catch men and though their houses are full of deceit, they wax fat and rich.'"

CHIEF OF SECRET SERVICE NOT A WELCOME PASSENGER.

NEW YORK, June 16.—(Special.)—There was a very lively time on the ship when the Kronprinzessin Cecilie docked this week. One of the passengers on the ship was John Wikke, the chief of the Treasury Secret Service. He had crossed and returned on the round trip of the ship. He said he had gone aboard for a little sea air. But the officials of the customs service not naturally associated the appearance of Mr. Wikke with the investigation now being made into smuggling at the port of New York and they made a minute search of every piece of luggage which came ashore. The difficulties of the customs examination were doubled for the unfortunate passengers by the North German liner, and they sincerely hoped—for this reason alone—that they may not have Mr. Wikke for a fellow-passenger again.

"President Taft's profound knowledge of the science of government, his deep human sympathy, his conceded love of justice and appreciation of the real needs of a prosperous and progressive people will enable him to carry forward in his own way the great policies of the Roosevelt administration with which he was conspicuously identified, and it may well be expected that under his wise leadership those policies will be developed and made real and effective. The American demand for the equality of right and opportunity at home and that respect and those privileges accorded to which are accorded to the most favored nation."

Arrival of Cruisers at Honolulu May Cause Trouble.

STRIKE LEADERS HOPEFUL

Urge Plantation Hands to Keep Up Fight Until Aso and Soya Arrive—American Cruiser Is Also Due.

HONOLULU, June 16.—With the leaders awaiting a reply to their appeal to Ambassador Takahira at Washington to make the arrest of four Japanese editors and the seizure of their papers last week by the territorial authorities the subject of an international inquiry, there have been no further developments in the Japanese strike situation.

Small groups of Japanese have returned to work unopposed on some of the plantations, and numerous conferences were held today by the leaders, whose preliminary examination on the charges of conspiracy will begin Friday morning.

Police Still Vigilant. Precautionary measures taken by the police have not been relaxed, but so far there has been no indication of disorder on the part of the strikers, who, while much incensed over the arrest of their leaders, are conducting themselves peacefully.

The authorities, however, are apprehensive that the coming of the Japanese cruisers Aso and Soya, which will arrive in a few days from Seattle, will be made an occasion for a demonstration on the part of the strikers.

Leaders Talk of Ships. Both the coming of the Japanese training squadron and that of the cruiser St. Louis, which also will arrive at Honolulu in a few days, are in accordance with a schedule arranged many weeks ago by the navy departments of the two countries. This, however, is not being told the ignorant strikers by their leaders, who are taking advantage of the occasion and making use of the coming of the Japanese warships to get their force to stand firm in their demands for higher wages, and not return to work.

Renewed threats, it is said, have been made against M. Sheba, editor of a local conservative Japanese paper, who opposed the strike. He has requested the police to furnish him with a bodyguard.

Appeals Sent to America. A letter to Takahira setting forth the steps taken by the Higher Wage Association and reciting the acts of the association.

actings consul-general for Japan in this city, said today:

"There is nothing in the Honolulu situation, so far as I am advised, to warrant official action either by the Japanese government or by the United States. The present disturbance has been caused by a few young hotheads and does not in any way reflect the real feeling in the islands. The Hawaiian police should cope with the situation, and if necessary arrest every man who engages in a riot or incites a riot. The Japanese Government will not tolerate any lawlessness on the part of its people wherever they may be. If such an appeal were made by the Hawaiian Japanese, it probably would be in vain, for there is little or nothing in common between the strikers in Hawaii and the Japanese on the Pacific Coast."
