HENEY THUNDERS AGAINST GALHOUN

Tells Story of Boss Rule in American Cities to Justify Immunity.

WHY HE RUNS FOR OFFICE

Wishes to Free City From Rule of Grafters-Says Bribe Was Paid by Ford-Case Will Go to Jury Saturday.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17 .- Francis J. Heney, well-known throughout the country as a prosecutor before he came to this city four years ago, laid down his half-completed argument in the case of Patrick Calhoun tonight after relating his ambition to become District Attorney of the new administrawith all the vehemence of his fiery disposition, the theory on which the pros-ecution bases the charge of bribery against the president of the United Railroads. Mr. Hency expects to conclude by tomorrow afternoon.

It is hoped that Judge William P. Lawlor, after submission of the argument, will elect to give his instruc-tions, which will require about three hours to deliver, and will give the case to the jury in a night session. Otherwise, it is admitted, the instructions will be deferred until Saturday morn-

All Bosses Divide Spoil.

Mr. Heney exploited this story of Mr. Heney exploited this story of several political bosses with whose history he manifested acquaintance. "Go down the line," said the speaker. "Remember Tweed, of New York, Butler, of Missouri, Blind Chris' Buckley, Sam Rainey and Phil Crimmins, of San Francisco. Can you recall whether they divided with their subordinates? Do you suppose they prospered without the co-operation of the men they put in office?"

He attempted to demonstrate to the first the prosecution had no course open save to grant immunity to the supervisors who gave the most direct testimony against the defendant, and testimony against the derendant, and he related in every detail the story of Abraham Ruef, Eugene Schmitz and the other men charged with complicity in the bribery of labor union adminis-

Mr. Hency spoke in a courtroom packed to the doors and crowded beyond the doors into the lobby of Carpenters' Hail. Judge Frank H. Dunne, before whom several of the graft defendants have been tried, shared the bench with Judge Lawlor and the large audience included several prominent clargemen.

What Makes Bosses Possible.

On the subject of bossism, Mr. Heney What a spectacle is this for American citizens. The history of the country shows that the menace to our existence as a republic lies in our great cities, where we foster the bosses. Bosses are not created—they merely take advantage of conditions. They are supported by two classes, as they were at the time of the second election of Fugene E. Schmitz. One holds forth in the tendarisin where they were at in the tenderioin, where they want a permit to commit crime, to run opium joints, dance halls and to rob drunken joints, dance halls and to rob drunken men, hoping to arrange it that the police may be blind. The other class preys from above. They are the people who live on Pacific avenue and in the so-called fashionable neighborhoods. They want higher dividends from their investments in their gas and rallway privileges. But you don't mean that they join hands with the tenderloin to accomplish these ends? Yes, that's exactly what I do mean. And this is what makes the boss possible. By sending the Ruefs and that By sending the Ruefs and that ilk to the penitentiary you do not change conditions, you merely create a vacancy for another boss."

Devote Life to Principle.

Mr. Hency said he was willing to devote his life to a principle; that he had been forced by conditions to accept a nomination for District Attorney of San Francisco and he bitterly scored the attorneys for the defense on account of their criticism of his acceptance of funds from Rudolph Spreckels. It is practically assured that Mr. Heney's address will continue throughout tomorrow's session of court.

When the balliff rapped for order and A. A. Moore advanced to the balliff rapped for order and court.

A. A. Moore advanced to the jury box for the last installment of his long ad-dress, the space reserved for counsel and press was tightly packed with privileged spectators.

privileged spectators.
"I deplore, as you must," said Mr.
Moore in the course of his remarks, "that San Francisco has been put back and kept back indefinitely by warring factions, whether they war for revente only or purely for political purposes."

The speaker then declared his intention to demonstrate that neither the president of the United Railways nor any of his attorneys or agents had in any manner obstructed the course of justice.

Moore Merciless to Helms.

Of John H. Helms, the detective at one time in the employ of the defense and prosecution, he said: "Helms, by his own statement, went to the wilds of Northern California to put up a trap for a brother Mason at the behest of his imported chief, W. J. Burns. It was brutal perifdy, one of the bard, inhuman things that appear in this record.

in this record."

Mr. Moore defended the process whereby agents of the defense occured copies of the reports on jurdes. He denounced W. J. Burns for inaugurating what he termed a "spy system on men called to the high offices of the jury."

"If this thing had been feasible from the standpoint of the prosecution," he said, "they would have stocked this jury with twelve men who had preconceived opinions hostile to this defendant. Is it to be wondered at that we cld not submit to jurors selected by this man Burns, imported for a devilish purpose, even though we were told that the prosecution was working for the honor and glory of God?

Mr. Moore's closing words were as follows; "In a moment more I shall leave with you the honor of Patrick Calhoun.

"Every man is master of his own soul.
No taint can come except by his own act. But taint may come to his honor by obloquy, through the pain and degradation of punishment for an uncommitted crime, worse than any death a man can die.

"Life is not ours to keep. Each one of us knows that he nightly pitches his tent a day's march nearer his last home. But his honor is his to keep, and life is nothing in comparison with henor. A man lies down with the innumerable caravan, but his honor goes down to his children and their children.

"So we want to leave Patrick Calhoun's honor unstained. This has been a long war. We must end it, and we end it gladly. We leave with you the honor of Patrick Calhoun, persuaded that justice will be done and that the great and good God who regulates the course of the universe and watches the fall of the sparrow will give the victory to Patrick Calhoun."

Heney's Impassioned Words.

Mr. Hency's address, which was com-menced within 10 minutes, had scarcely started when his voice was raised to a pitch that carried his words to the street through the open windows. The vigor that has characterized many of his less important battles during the trial was applied in delivery of his opening words; his face grew scarlet with the vehemence of his utterance, and his of his utterance, and his arms forcibly in the gestures that usually he employs.

"You know now how much force there was in Mr. Moore's offer to submit this case to you without argument," said Mr. Heney. "He came before you with a well-prepared address and he talked for a day and a half.

"He has asked you to presume Patrick Calban invocant. He has asked you to

"He has asked you to presume Patrick Calhoun innocent. He has asked you to presume that every man, woman and child in this community who has raised a hand in defense of justice are scoundrels of the deepest dye. He has asked you to presume that Spreckels, Phelan and Heney are steeped in villainy, but that Patrick Calhoun is innocent.
"Isn't there enough here of eyidence Isn't there enough here of syldence of guilt to sink Patrick Calhoun to the bottomless pit of hell? Don't shrink, gentlemen; he is only as you and I, and he is guilty. Every hair in his head is guilty. Caught in one crime, he has been back of a dozen more to prevent his conviction and obstruct the course of justice.

"A man will do much for his liberty, even to the commission of new crimes, and Patrick Calhoun is willing to pull down this Government, of which he boasts to be so stalwart a supporter.

to be so stalwart a supporter.
"When they say that the grand jury which indicted Mr. Calhoun was dominated by the District Attorney or by Ru-dolph Spreckels, they ask you to believe again Mr. Calhoun is not guilty, and that at least 12 of these 18 men-all as upright

"I have purposely refrained during this trial from attempting to gain the friend-ship of any man on this jury. I have done nothing to curry your favor. But you have watched me all these weeks and you know what manner of man and what manner of prosecutor stands before you. You know whether or not I was justified in resenting what I did resent. Is there one among you who would have taken as much as I have taken? I did not mind it. I have been fighting for a principle.

"But I will never go into a court again as long as I live and allow any man to abuse me in the performance of a public duty, so help me God. I don't say that because of my personal objection, but because I love justice. ### Says Ford Paid Bribe.
