Will Refute Farnum Story.

Mrs. Gould said today that she had obtained evidence to refute the testimony of the employes of the Hotel Bellevue-Stratford, who testified that they saw Dustin Farnum, the actor, leave her apartments early one morning during her stay at the Philadelphia Hotel in 1906. Mrs. Gould's lawyer today declined to say what the refuting evidence was, but said there would be many surprises for the defense. The first deposition taken up by Mr. Shearn was that of Mrs. Alice S. Bankhead, of Atlanta, Ga., wife of Lieutenant Henry Bankhead, of Fort McPherson,

Mrs. Bankhead accompanied the Goulds on their yacht from Cairo to Alexandria. Mrs. Gould's conduct was 'perfect and beyond criticism," accord ing to Mrs. Bankhead. Mrs. Gould was never intoxicated during the trip, the witness deposes. The witness states that she visited Mrs. Gould at Castle Gould and the St. Regis Hotel for periods of several weeks at a time, and never saw her use intoxicants to excess at any time. Gould never drank more than a cocktail before dinner and only light wine with her dinner, not more than the

"Mrs. Gould would usually take a cocktall before luncheon, but the extent of her drinking was not noticeable to me on account of her conduct," the witness continued. She never saw Mrs. Gould drunk in the evening and never heard her swear or use improper language. The witness was with Mrs. Gould in Chicago in 1907, and noticed nothing improper in her conduct. Mrs. Bankhead said daughter, Katherine, who was born Au gust 21, 1905, was named after Mrs. Gould

On cross-examination, Mrs. Bankhead would not swear that she had never heard Mrs. Gould spoken of as a "drink-She said that Mrs. Goule had never spoken to her but once about Dustin Farnum, the actor, and then told that their names were "not linked together" in any improper way.

Mr. Shearn next read the deposition of Lieutenant Bankhead, who testified in regard to various visits of himself and wife to the Gould estates and at hotels in this city. He had never seen Mrs. Gould intoxicated or observed her conduct to be unladylike.

The witness deposed he had never seen her drink more than any of the guests at dinners.

On cross-examination Lieutenant Bankhead said that when placed on oath to tell the truth he would testify "unhesitatingly" in regard to a woman's con-

Murphy, an automobile broker, who said he had charge of the private garage at Castle Gould from September, 1900, to April, 1902, testified that he frequently drove Mrs. Gould about the estate. He neves heard her curse or swear and never saw her when she showed "any signs of being under the influence of liquor."

On cross-examination Mr. Murphy said he had never talked with Mrs. Gould about the case. He admitted he had made an affidavit in the case in 1906. Michael J. Guiffy, who said he was superintendent of buildings at Castle Gould from August, 1902, to May, 1904, and met Mrs. Gould almost daily in his work, testified that he had never seen her under the influence of liquor nor heard her use abusive language.

According to letters introduced by Mr. Nicoll, the witness had written Mrs. Gould's secretary in September, 1908, to get permission to visit Castle Gould and was refused.

Jacob Cocks, who said he had done general road building, carting, etc., for Mrs. Gould at Castle Gould from 1901 to 1906 and sometimes met her to get orders as often as three times a day, testified that during this five-year period he had never seen Mrs. Gould intoxicated or heard her use abusive language.

Why She Went to Wine Cellar.

Mr. Trotter, a carpenter, testified at a previous session of the trial that while at the Gould farm he saw Mrs. Gould and John W. Adams, a plumber, drinking together in the cellar. Adams testified today that he remembered that he and Trotter and Mrs. Gould went into the cellar together, as she had asked him to move some boards. He had never seen when she acted as if she were under the influence of liquor.

J. B. Jones, who was Mrs. Gould's private secretary at Castle Gould and at the St. Regis Hotel in 1904-05, said that Mrs. Gould dictated letters to him each day, and that he never saw her intoxicated or heard her swear.

William Cullen, a steward on the Gould yacht in 1902, testified that Mrs. Gould always conducted herself properly as far as he observed her aboard the yacht.

Mr. Shearn read the deposition of a Lynchburg, Va., lawyer who had taken depositions at the Lynchburg Hotel, where it is contended Mrs. Gould and Dustin Farnum were stopping at the same time in 1806. The Lynchburg lawyer denied that Pullen, the waiter, had ever told him that he had seen a man in Mrs. Gould's parlor at the Carroll House in Lynchburg. The waiter later on made a deposition for the other side in New York telling of the presence of a man in Mrs. Gould's room in the hotel in Lynchburg.
