Spokane Handwriting Sleuth Iuspects and Measures Signatures in Court and Makes Sensational Charges.

PENDLETON, Or., July 9 .- (Special.) Characterizing as a forgery a will that for three years has been conceiled to be genuine, and declaring that several letters purporting to have been written by the late James W. Young were forged by Dr. F. D. Watts, of Dent, Idaho, E. H. Thompson, a handwriting expert of Spokane, sprang still another sensation in a will contest that has become famous for the number of charges and counter-charges of forgery charges and counter-charges of forgery

The will which Thompson says has the forged signature of Young attached bears the date of September 3, 1891, and it purports to give the bulk of the Young estate to Mrs. Nora Watts, niece of the deceased and wife of the man accused of forging the letters which were introduced as evidence recently to show the kindly feeling Young en-tertained toward his niece and the remainder of his heirs, with the excep-tion of Mabel Warner.

Expert Sure of Forgery.

The expert declared the forgery of Young's signature had been made by a tracing and insisted that every test which an expert would apply to the signature must show it to be a forgery. With a small magnifying glass he pointed out to the court the two colors of ink which had been used, maintaining that the signature had first been traced with blue ink and then copied over with black.

The tracing was such a bungling job and the blurs of an attempted erasure so evident that the attorneys for the contesting heirs immediately declared that the will had been tampered with while in the possession of Mrs. Warner, her attorney, or the experts, who had been given permission by Judge Gilliland to remove the document from the courtroom for examination. District Attorney Phelps, who is a member of counsel for the contestants, declared that some one would be held responsible for the alleged tampering.

Taking up the so-called fourth will. Thompson declared that the signature to it, as well as the famous letter of denunciation and the memorandum of contract, were all genuine. These had been pronounced forgeries by W. W. Williams and A. A. Albian, of Fortland, on the ground that they were all exactly allke and therefore could not have been written by one man. > Judge Clifford, of Pierce County, Holds Statute in Conflict With Interstate Commerce

TACOMA, July 9.—(Special.)—In passing upon the case brought before him to test the recently enacted anti-cigarette law, Judge Clifford, of the Superior Court, today ruled the law at variance with the Interstate commerce act, and denied its Judge Clifford, in his decision, said: "I am forced to the conviction that the sec tion of the statute which in the broadest terms makes it a misdemeanor to have in possession cigarettes is in violation of in possession cigarettes is in violation of the interstate commerce clause of the Federal Constitution. It is conceded that cigarettes are articles of interstate com-merce. The sale of an article of inter-state commerce may be regulated by a state in the exercise of police powers, but no state may, under the guise of regula-tion, prohibit the use within its borders of any recognized article of interstate commerce. If it is unlawful for any citicommerce. If it is unlawful for any citizen of the state to have a cigarette in his possession, the practical result is inevitably the prohibition of the use of, or any commerce in cigarettes within the state. Colonel W. H. Holabird, personal representative of the wizard of the Pacifics, is spending a few days at Pelican Bay Lodge, whither he was accompanied from Klamath Falls by a contractor who, it is believed, is to make important changes in the location of buildings, and possibly clear the ground where the original lodge stands to make way for a new and commodious modern building.

This phase of the filness of Mr. Harriman deeply interests the people of Kiamath, for the railroad president has a pleasing personality and although his cision, Prosecuting Attorney McMurray said that pending an appeal to the Su-preme Court, there would be no further prosecutions for cigarette smoking. He declined to say, however, what his atti-tude would be toward the sale of ciga-rettes, there being some doubt as to the effect of the decision on that question.

when here last Fall, Mr. Harriman stated that in all probability business would require his presence abroad this year and that he would not be able to visit Klamath for very long, if at all, but the matter of health may suggest that he return here instead of remaining across the Atlantic. There is nowhere that his coming would be accorded a warmer welcome than in Klamath County, and the wish is general that he may come to Pelican Bay for a prolonged stay. CABIN ERECTED IN CL ARK COUNTY IN 1858.

PRIMITIVE STRUCTURE HOUSED MRS. ELLEN M'NARY FOR HALF CENTURY. VANCOUVER, Wash., July 9.—(Special.)—One of the old cabins erected in Clark County in pioneer days stands near Ridgefield, 18 miles northwest of Vancouver. The cabin was built in 1858, and since its construction until two years ago, when she died, was the home of Mrs. Ellen McNary. Her husband died 30 years ago.

The cabin is built of fir logs, and in 1858 the site where it stood was in the midst of a wild and thickly timbered country. There was no road to the place and the nearest neighbor was two miles away through the trackless woods. Mrs. McNary was of Irish descent, and her log cabin home was long known as one of the most hospitable places in the vicinity of Ridgefield. Frank McNary, a son of Mrs. McNary, is a resident of Woodstock, Or., and a daughter, Mrs. MaryMictoler, resides in Tacoma.
