W. J. PETRAIN In the presence of August Herrmann, chairman of the National Baseball Compitcher, now doing duty for McCredle's Pacific Coast League Team, pitched a 10-inning no-hit, no-run victory over the Los Angeles club. Portland registored the only run of the game, allowed by Will Tozer, in the 10th canto. It was a remarkable game all the way, and both twirlers won all kinds of Carson's work was exceptional, for during the 10 innings of fast and snap-py ball, he permitted only one man to reach first base. That man was Judson Smith, of the Angel tribe, who arrived

Smith, of the Angel tribe, who arrived safely at the initial sack on an excusable error by Ivor Olson in the eighth inning, and this error was the only miscue in the entire contest.

Carson's feat is a Pacific Coast record. No-hit, no-run games have been pitched before, but in every instance two or more men have been left on the paths. In addition Carson had splendid control. He handed up his slants and curves in such a dazzling fashion that the Angles were absolutely helpless. In seven innings not one of the visitors had the slightest chance to negotiate first base, and the first two men up in the eighth were retired. Jud Smith was the third man in this inning, which marred a perfect record for Carwhich marred a perfect record for Car-son. Jud hit sharply to Olson, who, in attempting to field the ball, was hit on the wrist, the ball bounding away from him and Smith reaching first in Portland won the game in the 10th fining. Dick Breen led off with a sixzling single past Smith. Gus Fisher crossed Tozer, who agured on a sacrifice, whereas Fisher lined a terrific drive straight at the Angel twirler, who was knocked down by the impact, and both Fisher and Breen were safe. Carson aided materially in winning his game by dumping a neat sacrifice which sent Breen to third and Fisher to second. The latter came near helng caught off the keystone sack by a quick throw ond. The latter came near near near off the keystone sack by a quick throw from Tozer, but Howard muffed the toss. Then Ivor Olson won the game by scoring Breen with a long sacrifice fly to Artie Ross, who played the left veldt in place of Gedwin, who was indisposed.

Herrmann and his party, who occu-pied box seats with Judge McCredie, pronounced the article of ball high-pronounced the article of ball high-class in every respect.

It cannot be said that the players gingered up simply on account of the presence of the "king pin" of baseball, for the two teams had been playing fine ball before Hermann's arrival. Furthermore, it is usually the case when baseball notables are present that when baseball notables are present that the teams go to pleces and play their worst. In nine innings the Angel twirler, who, by the way, leads the Pacific Coast League in percentage of victories, allowed but three hits and was remarkably steady in the pinches.

Portland has now won three straight games from Los Angeles and in hope of making it four, Jesse Garrett is slated to oppose Franz Hosp this afterneon.

SPOKANE, Wash., July 22.-(Special.)-The Indians put the fourth straight from Portland away in moth balls today before the first inning was over, taking kindly. to the delivery of Pinnance, who was not their kind of an Indian. Subsequently they got to Chinault for two more runs, so that an eighth inning rally by the Colts , although it netted four runs, availed the visitors nothing. Score, 6-4. The Injune started after the crippled Colts before the curtain had scarcely risen. After Clines had made an easy infield out, Aliman drove one through and past Staton and Weed hoisted one to Gough, left fielder pro tem, which Gough dropped. Connors and James drove hot dropped. Connors and James drove not liners through between first and second, sending two men home ahead of them. Then Stevens sent one out for Bassey in right to drop and Connors registered.

Chinault Replaces Pinnance.

Here Pinnance retired and Chinault was substituted. There were no hits in that inning, but James scored on an out, sy to Kennedy.

Cooney to Kennedy.

In the first and second innings it looked as though Phil Dellar would meet the same fate as the Portland chief, but he stendled just in time. Dellar was wild, and though he grew better as the game went on, his trouble locating the plate wore on him and he was weak at the end. His support was uniformly poor, but Chinault's was worse, although the curly-haired pitcher was hard to hit.

Portland Gets Four in Eighth.

In the fifth the Indians got two more In the fifth the Indians got two more. Weed singled with one out, acquired one of his two stolen bases and advanced to third on Connor's long fly. James walked. Fournier threw the ball into center field when James tried to steal second, and Weed scored. Then Stevens lined out a two-basger and brought James in. Portland had got but two hits off Dellar until the eighth, when Gough started with a single. Staton fanned, Crocker, Fournier and Chinault got three in a row and Bassey cleaned the bases with a drive through Stevens' legs to the fence. Altman saved the game by getting Cooney's liner and doubling Bassey at third. Port-
