WASHINGTON, July 25.—(Special.)— No one any longer pretends to doubt there is a deadly foud between the Interior Department and the Forest Service, which is a branch of the Agricultural Department.

Indian Office Agreement Off.

The latest phase of this fight is the termination by Ballinger of a co-operative arrangement heretofore exist-ing between the Forest Service and the Indian Office in the protection of for-ests on Indian reservations and in the ests on Indian reservations and in the sale of timber and the supervision of logging. ## LAND SUIT IS DECIDED

BEARING ON UMATILLA CASES IS IMPORTANT.

Judge Bean Reverses Ruling of Interior Department on Basis of Defendants' Demurrer.

PENDLETON, Or., July 25.—(Special.)

—A decision, regarded here as of farreaching importance, was handed down yesterday by Circuit Judge H. J. Bean, in a case involving reservation lands.
The decision is considered important because the point at issue was identical with that involved in the famous Uma-tilla land cases in which Colonel J. H. Raiey and a number of other prominent residents of Pendicton and this county residents of Pendleton and this county are involved as defendants. A direct reversal of recent departmental rulings is also contained in the decision.

The came decided was that of J. H. Lawrey versus Charles Hanna Socialed "grazing land" upon the Umatilla reservation was purchased by Lawrey in 1902, in compliance with the provisions of the famous Fulton act, the price per acre being $1.25. Following the purchase, Lawrey's entry was contested by Hanna on the ground that the land was agricultural and that Lawrey and was agricultural and that Lawrey had never lived upon it. The Land Of-fice ruled with the contestant, as did also the Commissioner-General of the office and the Secretary of the Interior. Thereupon Lawrey brought suit in the Circuit Court of the state to establish his claim to the land. The basis of his plea before the court, as it was before made by the Government was an absolute sale and that the Government could not go back of this sale to entertain

In the demurrers to the indictments against the Umatilla County men, the same plea was made as in the case just decided. Should Judge Wolverton allow this contention, the cases now pending will likely be dismissed by the Government.

Gives Receipt, but Draws Pay.

It is a little puzzling to know why a man who severed his connection with the Pederal service in January, 1997, should be paid material lump sums every few months for a period of two years thore-after. Representative Tawney, chairman of the House appropriations committee, makes the statement that Heney was makes the statement that Heney was paid $23,000 during the fiscal year 1909, but rendered the Government no service during that time. That statement is supported by the Chief Clerk of the Department of Justice in his testimony before the appropriations committee. ore the appropriations committee. But there is still another reason why the House wants an investigation. rding second-hand information which was laid generally before members, Mr. Heney, after being paid a total sum of $84.175 gave to the Attorney-General a receipt in full for all amounts due him a receipt in full for all amounts due him as prosecuting officer in the various land fraud cases in which he has been engaged. After giving that receipt he performed no known service for the Government; this is stated by this same official of the Department of Justice in his testimony before the appropriations committee. Yet, after having receipted in full, Heney, on July 5, 1968 received a $10,000 payment, and on January 21, last, was paid another $5,000, or $15,000 in excess of what he himself admitted was due him when he gave his receipt in full.

Heney's Pull Puzzles.

Senators and Representatives who have undertaken to probe into this matter say they have never been able to get a satisfactory or definite explanation of why these belated payments were made to Mr. Heney, especially the $15,000 paid him after he had closed his account with the government. To all inquiries the answer is given that these payments were made on account of services rendered by Heney before he resigned in January, 1907. There is no effort on the part of 1867. There is no effort on the part of the Department to explain what these services were; when they were rendered; what they accomplished, or anything about them. Always the answer comes, "for services previously rendered." That is all that has been brought to light thus inference conveyed is that Heney will not receive further compensation from the Department unless he again takes the Department unless he again takes up and prosecutes some one or more of the long-standing cases, with which he has been associated. If he does conduct the prosecution in the Hermann case or the retrial of the Williamson case, he will be paid; otherwise, he will receive no further compensation. But even this statement is not made officially, and so far as the committees of Congress have been able to discover, there is no recorded assurance from the Attorney-General that Heney must work for whatever money he receives hereafter.

However, in one of the speeches he made in the House, Representative Tawney stated that Heney had been paid nothing since Mr. Wickersham became Attorney-General, and he felt became Attorney-General, and he felt convinced that he would be paid nothing by Mr. Wickersham unless he rendered real service. In so many words, he said that Heney would not, by this administration, be paid for work he did not perform. In view of the fact that Mr. Tawney had a conference with the Attorney-General before making that statement in the House, it is reasonable to assume that he spoke by authority.

Just how Heney stands with this administration is still in some doubt. Public men who have talked with the Attorney-General have come away with the impression that Mr. Wickersham has not that same high regard for Heney that was entertained by his predecessor. It is well known that subordinate officials of the Department of Justice do not think or speak well of Heney. It may therefore be reasonably concluded that Heney is no longer held in the highest regard by the Department of Justice. His methods, both in court, and before grand juries, are frowned upon, and it is understood that this opinion is shared, to some extent, at least, by the Attorney-General as well.

Taft Fears to Drop Heney.

Taft Fears to Drop Heney.

Furthermore, President Taft is said to have expressed dissatisfaction with Heney's methods. It is said that he Furthermore, President Tatt is said to have expressed dissatisfaction with Heney's methods. It is said that he would like to see the Government finality sever its relations with him. But there is just one thing that prevents the curtailment of Heney's services. Heney is a survivor of the Roosevelt administration; it is commonly known that President Roosevelt helieved in Heney's name has long been associated with land fraud prosecutions. In view of the state of public mind, if this administration, at this time, should abruptly drop Heney, and announce that he would not again be employed to prosecute any land fraud cases, the cry would go up that "Taft is breaking away from the Roosevelt policies—he does not propose to continue the prosecution of land theves—he is going to let the grafters have full sway." And more to the same effect.

Men well versed in the inside of things in this administration say that but for this prospect. Francis J. Heney would be cut off from all connection with the Department of Justice, not again to be employed under the Taft administration. In their judgment. Mr. Heney is a white elephant on the hands of the administration—an elephant that President Taft would gladly lose but for the unfavorable comment that might arise should he follow his personal inclinations.

All of which may be changed, if Congress is successful in driving its probe to the bottom. The only thing that stands in the way of a successful investigation is the desire of the Department of Justice of this administration to uncover nothing that will reflect upon its record during the Roosevelt administration.
