It was a far more snappy game than that of the previous day, and even up to the eighth inning, during which the score was tied most of the time, it was a con-test where few kicks were interjected to mar the serenity of the work. Umpire Toman donned the mask and pad and called the balls and strikes. He got away with his work in fairly good shape, only with his work in fairly good shape, only about 16 kicks being made on his deci-

Some of the "roughnecks" who bet on the games became extremely ruffled at his interpretations of balls and strikes, and were unduly excited in several instances, depending on which team was getting the worse of it, in their estimation, which was based totally upon the placing of the bet either on the Seals or on Portland. It would be a mighty good thing for the game if some of these parties were flagged at the gate.

For four innings the register was kept clear of ambitious athletes, but in the fifth Portland put over the first run on Fisher's two-bagger and a pretty single by George Ort. In the Seals' half of the sixth the score was tied because Jesse Garrett issued the only pass to "Speed Marvel" Zeider, who trotted all the way home on Bodie's double.

Matters progressed smoothly until the eighth, when, in Portland's half, the home guard got extremely busy with "Cackle" Henley. Ort was the first man up, but Melchlor hooked his line drive in nice style. Dick Breen then connected for a three-base smash between Jim Williams and Bodie. scheduled to throw two men in 75 minutes of actual wrestling time, failed in the effort; at least such was the announcement of the timekeepers, whose watches, however, shut off the proceedings five minutes ahead of the tab

The Seattle medico's opponents were The Seattle medico's opponents were Big Yousiff and Charles Olsen, the former going on in place of John Berg, who was unable to grapple because of an injured ankle, and even though the time rught have been cut shorter than the scheduled period, the bouts were interesting enough to cause keen excitement throughout. Even the preliminary between Strangler Smith and Bob Bulger was far from uninterest. Bob Bulger was far from uninterest-

Naturally interest centered in the main event, which was one of the best exhibitions seen here in some time. The Turk was sent against Roller first, and the crowd commenced to show anticipation as soon as the dark complexioned chap set his tootsles in the areas. Roller made his appearance and, after both principals were introduced, Mark Shaughnessy, of Spokane, who was se-lected by Jack Curiey to refere the main event, was also introduced. Mark looked natural as of old, and really proved a capable referee. He was se-lected at the last minute, for Al Kauf-man, the heavyweight "champion of San Francisco," as he was introduced. The Turk rushed Roller savagely, but the medico displayed some of his boxing proclivities and Youssiff manifested a keen dislike for a resounding slap on the side of the jaw. The Turk then dodged under Roller's guard and attempted to dump the physician Roller easily evaded the rushes and when the two finally landed on the mat the doctor was uppermost. Then commenced a flerce series of grappiling and struggling.

Then commenced a flerce series of grap-pling and struggling.

Roller fastened the terrible toe hold on Youssiff and the foreigner soon com-menced to show signs of excruciating agony. His gameness, however, wen him instant favor with the crowd, which at first was inclined to rag him unmerci-fully, probably on account of his tactics in his match with Berg several days ago, but when he stayed with Roller despite the twisting and turning of his ankle enthusiasm was unlimited.

Roller then tried other holds and worked his hardest to accomplish the downfall of the Ottoman. Youssiff kept him in trouble all the time by resorting to various tactics. After the bout had progressed 45 minutes, Roller again secured toe hold, and this time it looked for certain that the Turk's finish was in sight. After enduring a painful siege, lasting several minutes, he finally again extricated himself from his predicament and gave Roller a hot tussle to keep the upper hold. Roller finally secured a body scissors and by working this for some time, he finally weakened the Turk, who, after sors and by working this for some time, he finally weakened the Turk, who, after squirming from this hold, was encompassed in a head and wrist lock and was placed to the mat in 55 minutes and 20 seconds of hard wrestling.

After the second fall of the prelminary was staged, the Seattle man was sent sgainst Charles Olson. This grappler is a freak in the wrestling world, for to look at him he does not seem strong enough to break a match. In fact, he is so slight in build that most everyone thought it a shame to send such a frail man against the well-proportioned Roller.

The preliminary resulted in a well-carned victory for Strang: Smith, who conquered Bulger, once by the use of his favorite hold, the strangle, while the sec-ond fall he secured by a half nelson and leg lock.

As far as the Johnson deal with the New York club is concerned, with the New York club is concerned, Portland's manager was not cognizant of it yesterday, though he admitted that. Judge W. W. McCredie might have made such an arrangement. Still he doubted it, for he says Portland's dealing thus far in the matter of sale and exchange of players have been entirely with the Cleveland club. Furthermore Walter McCredie again positively announces that he has no players for sale, but might be willing to arrange a trade for some new talent.

T HE swat fest in that eighth inning yesterday decided the game beyond doubt, for Jesse Garrett was on the hilltop and pitching one of his best games.

The crowd seemed to have dwindled some, and the disgruntled ones have been so unkind as to say that San Francisco let us win in order to regain lost prestige. However, the Seals are not losing any games voluntarily, and yesterday's beat-ing was earned. The McCredle bunch held a long-delayed batting rally which brought home the bacon. Even Jesse Garrett butted into the glory column with a two-base smash on which there were no frills, it being the genuine article, and broke the tied score. The tail-end aggregation, as well as the
