TRIAL NEARS CONCLUSION

Murder Case in Which "Unwritten Law" Plays Important Part Will Probably Go Before Jury Early Tomorrow.

The Dickerson murder case will prob-ably be in the hands of the jury early tomorrow, for the defense has only three witnesses to call this morning. One of these is R. T. Dickerson himself, who is accused of shooting Harry A. Garthe court costs. is accused of shooting Harry A. Gar rett, his employe, because the latter had been making love to Mrs. Dickerson. At-torney John A. Jeffrey, representing Dickerson, also promises to connect up and introduce in evidence four letters of Mrs. an affectionate nature, written by Mrs. Dickerson to Garrett before the murder, which took place at the Dickerson ranch September 2, leaving a will which di-rects that lots 3 and 10, block 5, Albina Homestead, be sold and $1500 given to the Patten road, June 31.

In one of these letters, according to Jeffrey, Mrs. Dickerson sends "lots of love" and asks Garrett to meet her at Jeffrey, Mrs. Dicharson some ther at love" and asks Garreit to meet her at the Perkins Hotel. Another, written June 18, the next day, asks him to come to her room, No. 51, on the fifth floor, where she will meet him, and adds. "Don't let anyone see you come." Still another, written June 15, wants to know what day it was that Tom (Dickerson) was disguised, and adds suggestively. "He got left, anyway, didn't he?" This reference is to a time when Dickerson donned a soldier's uniform, supposedly to spy upon his wife and Garreit. Mrs. Mabel Benjamih, a cook at the Dickerson ranch until June 12, testifled yesterday that Garreit told her when she was leaving. "I would like to take a shot at that soldier boy."

Two more letters, which Mrs. Benja-min said Dickerson found in a trunk and brought downstairs for her to read, were introduced in evidence, and read to the jury yesterday. In these Mrs. Dickerson cantioned Garrett to be care-ful not to give her husband a clew as to what was going on, because the law-yers whom she had consulted in regard to her divorce case, then pending, had to her divorce case, then pending, had told her to be careful.
