seal through the ice.

A similar quest was being followed at every village from Annotook to Cape York. But all sea activity would now on be limited to a few open spaces near prominent headlands.

The scene of the real hunt changed from the sea to the land. We had as yet no caribou meat. The little auks gathered in nets during the Summer and elder ducks bagged later disappeared fast when used as steady diet We must procure hare, ptarmigan and reindeer, for we had not yet learned to eat with a relish the fishy, liver-like substance which is characteristic of all marine mammals.

Guns and ammunition were distributed, and when the winds were easy enough to allow one to venture out, every man sought the neighboring hills. Francke also took his exercise with a gun on his shoulder. The combined results gave a long line of ptarmigan, two reindeer and 16 hares. covered the upper slopes, the game was forced down near the sea, where could still hope to hunt in the feeble light of the early part of the night.

No Anxiety for Winter.

With a larder fairly well stocked and good prospects for other tasty meats. e were spared the usual anxiety of a Winter without Winter supplies, and Francke was fust the man to use this game to good effect, for he had a way of preparing our primitive provisions that made our dinners seem quite equal to a Holland House spread.

In the middle of October fox skins were prime and then new steel traps were distributed and set near the many caches. By this time the Eskimos had all abandoned their sealskin tents and were snugly settled in their Winter igloos. The ground was covered with ther depicted the great loss and insnow and the sea was nearly frozen over everywhere.

Everybody was busy preparing for the coming cold and night. The temperature was about 20 degrees below zero. Severe storms were becoming less frequent, and the air, though colder, was less humid and less disagreeable. An ice fort was formed and the Winter sledging was begun by short excursions to bait the fox traps and gather the foxes.

All these pursuits, the work of building and repairing sleds, making dog harness and shaping new Winter clothing, kept up a lively interest while the great crust which was to hold down the inruly deep for so many months thickened and closed.

During the last days of brief sunshine the weather cleared, and at noon on October 24 everybody sought the freedom of the open for a last glimpse of the dying day. There was a charm of color and glitter, but no one seemed quite happy as the sun sank under the southern ice, for it was not to rise again 118 days. The Eskimos took this as a signal to enter into a trance of sadness, in which the bereavement of each family and the discomfort of the year are enacted in dramatic chants or dances. But to us sunset of 1907 was inspiration for the final work in directing the shaping of the outfit with which to begin the con-
