Oregon Conservation Association Promises to Aid Bureau of Entomology.

WORK FOR APPROPRIATION

Forest Fires, Insect Enemies, Bird Friends, Patrol Service and Other Subjects Are Discussed at Meeting of Association.

Numerous elements that exist and elements that some think should exist, all having a bearing for or against conservation of Oregon timber, were discussed at a well-attended meeting of the Oregon Conservation Association last night, in the Commercial Club.

Although definite action was taken on but one matter, the talk included the subjects of forest, state appropriations for patrol service, closed seasons, prevention of fires started by stockmen, shortening of the game season, depredation of insects, value of wild birds to the timber owner, taxation and encouragement of irrigation.

The one definite action was in the adoption of a resolution urging the Congressional delegation of this state to seek larger appropriations for the work of the Bureau of Entomology of the Department of Agriculture. Copies of this resolution are to be sent to non-resident timber owners, with the request that they secure the aid of their Congressmen.

Supplemental to this resolution a motion was adopted providing for appointment of a committee which in the meantime will attempt to secure information and advice on the eradication of timber insect pests from the department of entomology of the State University, Oregon Agricultural College and the Government.

The subject was brought up by G. L. Langill, who said that he had endeavored to get the Government Bureau to send a representative to this state for the purpose of advising timber owners, but had received the reply that the appropriation granted by Congress for the work of the bureau was insufficient to permit the detailing of a representative for that purpose. Mr. Langill said that in a recent visit to the yellow fir belt of Clatsop County he had seen many white butterflies and had also noticed them in other sections of the timber. He declared his firm belief that they were a menace to the preservation of the standing forests.

A resolution deprecating high taxation of timber offered by Ben Irwin, of Milwaukie, was also considered by referring it to the board of managers without discussion.

On the subject of forest fires the stockmen and sportsmen came in for considerable criticism. Wells and Gilbert declared that the deer hunting season opened too early, thereby enticing hunters into the forests in the driest season of the year when their campfires spread and damaged the timber. He said the stockmen were making a practice of burning brush in order to make way for the new grass the following spring. He declared his company would prohibit stockmen from going on his lands.

F. S. Brumby declared that the open burning season was the cause of more forest fires than any other one thing.

It was indicated by the discussion last night that the association will soon take up the matter of attempting to secure the organization under one head of the forest fire patrol systems of the various large timber owners of the state or else compile statistics revealing for the information of the public, what the timber companies are doing in this matter.

The necessity for some such action was pointed out by A. T. Allen, United States District Forester. Mr. Allen said that in Idaho, Montana and Washington the timber owners had organized forest protective associations and contributed to a common fund for the suppression of fires. In October the timber owners of California will convene with a similar purpose in view.

The division of the western portion of the state into two districts, with a set of closed season laws applicable to each, was offered by Wells and Gilbert as a solution of opposition to closed seasons on the burning of brush and slashings. Mr. Gilbert said that in the low marshy ground in part of Western Oregon and particularly in the canyons the dry season was not so fraught with fire danger as in the foothills and mountainous regions.

Criticism by Ben Irwin of the National Conservation Congress for devoting so much time to the question of water conservation aroused G. M. Cornwall to take issue with him. Mr. Cornwall insisted that the lumbermen were strongly interested in the development of the arid lands of the west. The settlement of these lands, he said, would create a market for the common lumber of the west, which means the shut out of the East by reason of the cost of transportation and therefore goes to waste. Mr. Cornwall also went into the subject of taxation, and means for cutting tax bills, and a "cutting tax" to be paid when the timber is marketed. Equalizing the total taxation by making the yearly tax low and the cutting tax high would in his opinion induce timber-owners to conserve their holdings, which would become more valuable, and in the end the tax revenues would be enhanced without the owners feeling any hardship.

The committee appointed to investigate the ravages of insects and means for their eradication consists of J. C. Stevens, W. L. Finley and H. D. Langill.

Meetings for Season Scheduled—T. Morris Dunne, of Multnomah, Renamed Secretary—All Differences Buried.

At the annual meeting of the Pacific Northwest Amateur Athletic Association, the Northwestern branch of the Amateur Athletic Union, held at the Multnomah Athletic Club yesterday, officers for the ensuing year were elected and the interclub boxing and wrestling championship dates were adopted.

F. F. Emery, president of the Spokane Amateur Athletic Club, was chosen president of the association, and T. Morris Dunne, of the Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club, was re-elected secretary and treasurer, as well as chairman of the registration committee. The dates of the interclub boxing and wrestling championship, which for the first time since the following of these events at the Vancouver, H. C. Athletic Club, are as follows:

October 12—Seattle, A. C. at Vancouver.
November 6—Multnomah at Seattle.
November 19—Seattle at Vancouver.
November 19—Vancouver at Portland with M. A. C.
December 10—Multnomah at Spokane with M. A. C.
January 14—Seattle at Portland with Multnomah.
January 14—Vancouver at Spokane.
February 15—Multnomah at Vancouver.
February 22—Spokane at Seattle.
March 18—Spokane at Portland with Multnomah.
March 15—Vancouver at Seattle.

The P. N. A. A. championships in boxing and wrestling were awarded to the Vancouver Athletic Club, which organization for the first time, asked and was granted admission into the interclub boxing and wrestling series. At the meeting all differences over past disputes seemed buried and the arrangement of the schedules progressed without the least discussion. Some few changes were made in the original schedule, submitted by the results readily overcome by the switching of a date or two. President Conover, of the Seattle Athletic Club, and President Emery, of the Spokane club, expressed themselves as well pleased with the results attained by the meeting, and both are to work in conjunction with the Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club in the effort to bring National boxing and wrestling championships to Portland next year. The board of governors of the P. N. A. A. are also pledged to work on this subject, and so promised last night. A banquet hall is shown in which a woman falls asleep, her ancestors enter and man falls asleep, her ancestors enter and man falls asleep.

New Bills Open at the Vaudeville Houses

Orpheum.

IF YOU are laboring under the impression that vaudeville has reached the limit of originality, just stroll over this week to the Orpheum. The three exceptions are a mind-reading dog, a ventriloquist with a novel setting, and Mary Norman, a versatile comedienne, who is a monologist and caricature artist. The latter personal exaggerated types that you meet every day, made more realistic by her breezy and rapid-fire conversation. In Mrs. Norman's act, which she calls "Some Types of Women," her hat song is the biggest hit. In it she wears some freak chapeaus and others that must have depleted the Pasadena, Calif., called "The Boston City Quartet" are a capable group of vocalists, who enliven their act with well-taken nonsense, the funniest feature being a rough and tumble fight between a diminutive Dusty Rhodes and a dago of the Brother Sylvester school. A snappy playlet, "Wanted: A Sister," is given by three capable players, Lorraine Osborne, Robert Strauss and James Young, who are decidedly natural, and have a sketch that is void of a dull moment. The Hughes musical trio play on various instruments and have a varied repertoire.

The feature act is the ventriloquist, Ed F. Reynolds. The scenic effects are pretentious, a tiny speck on the curtain evolving into a "big red touring car," of vibrant form. The mannikin succeeded in making a stereotyped act interesting to an extreme. The stage represents a rural scene, and Mr. Reynolds presented his mannikin with the little follies and eccentricities that remove them from the realm of hackneyed bucolic drama.

Ladies' Day Friday.

Boys under 12 free to bleachers Wednesday.

ONLY one performance could be given at Pantages last evening on account of the late arrival of the unusually large amount of scenery and stage effects required in this week's act.

The bill, however, is unusually good, and presents some very attractive features.

Prominent among them is Naïda, and her comedy, consisting of a graceful little spirit who dances on her toes, and a dog who does only one turn, but does that well. The act is a series of beautiful illusions.

Markus brothers are a duo of comicalists, trombonists and saxophonists.

John J. Jusis and Ethel Romani are seen in a Russian tabloid drama, called "The Pledge of Coronova." Strong situations, intensity, heart interest and humanity fairly fall all over themselves for first place in this act. Its drama is well staged and their introduction of comedy into the vocalization is commendable.

Sutherland and Curtis are seen in an act which would be infinitely better if the male part were omitted. The girl is the only good part of the act and she is great. Her delineation of "Belle of Jay Town" and her Sir Hopkins' make-up for the part are irresistibly funny.
