

TAFT ON RIGHT, REACHES TACOMA

Throng Greet Him at Armory and He Dines at the Union Club.

WANTS TO SEE ALASKA, TOO

President Has Completed Eight Set Speeches Since Starting for West, and Addresses Will Here- after Be Extempore.

MENUS OF PRESIDENT'S MEALS ARE SIMPLE.

Very simple and plain will be the menus of the two meals at which President Taft will be guest of honor at the Portland hotel today. At breakfast the menu will consist of cantaloupe, sliced peaches, strawberries, cereals, grilled salmon trout, baked potatoes, old-fashioned style, omelette celestine, Virginia corn bread, puffa, drip coffee, cocoa and English breakfast tea. The menu for luncheon is made up of merry widow cocktail, cream of fresh mushrooms, chicken escalotier, sweet potatoes, Virginia tomatoes, strawberries, vanilla ice cream, fancy cakes and coffee. There is no fixed menu for the President's dinner or for Sunday's meals.

Enthusiastic Over Canal.

President Taft's unqualified statement in his speeches delivered here, that the Panama Canal would be completed in 1915 aroused great enthusiasm, as the entire Pacific Coast is expecting greatly to profit by the short all-water route from the Eastern seaboard and the opening of European markets to this section. All of the South and Central American countries, especially those on the Pacific coast, are to be invited to take a pretentious part in the Panama Exposition. The extension of trade between the United States and South America, the President declared, was another feature of the exposition which elicited his deep interest.

Eight Set Speeches Completed.

During the time he has been "on the road," the President has made eight speeches of first importance which have clearly set forth his views of nearly every question of importance, and he announced tonight that he had completed the list of set addresses, which he had planned before leaving Beverly. The President's speeches during the remainder of his trip will be entirely extempore in character and will consist largely of references to and amplifications of the ideas already expressed in making his set speeches. The President selected in the different cities visited the subject which he believed to be of greatest interest to his hearers.

His Views on Day's Issues.

At Chicago the President discussed labor and injunction. At Milwaukee he discussed and approved the establishment of a postal savings bank system; at Winona, Minn., he made plain his position with reference to the Payne tariff bill, and the new tariff commission; at Des Moines, Ia., he outlined his ideas of needed amendments to the Interstate Commerce and anti-trust laws; at Denver he devoted his remarks to the corporation tax and dwelt upon what he deemed its advantages in preference to a direct income tax; at Spokane, where the irrigation Congress had been held but a short time previous to his visit, the President discussed the conservation of natural resources and the reclamation of arid lands; and finally, at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, he gave his views regarding the future government of Alaska by a commission and came out flat-footed for a ship subsidy law.

Expects to Visit Alaska.

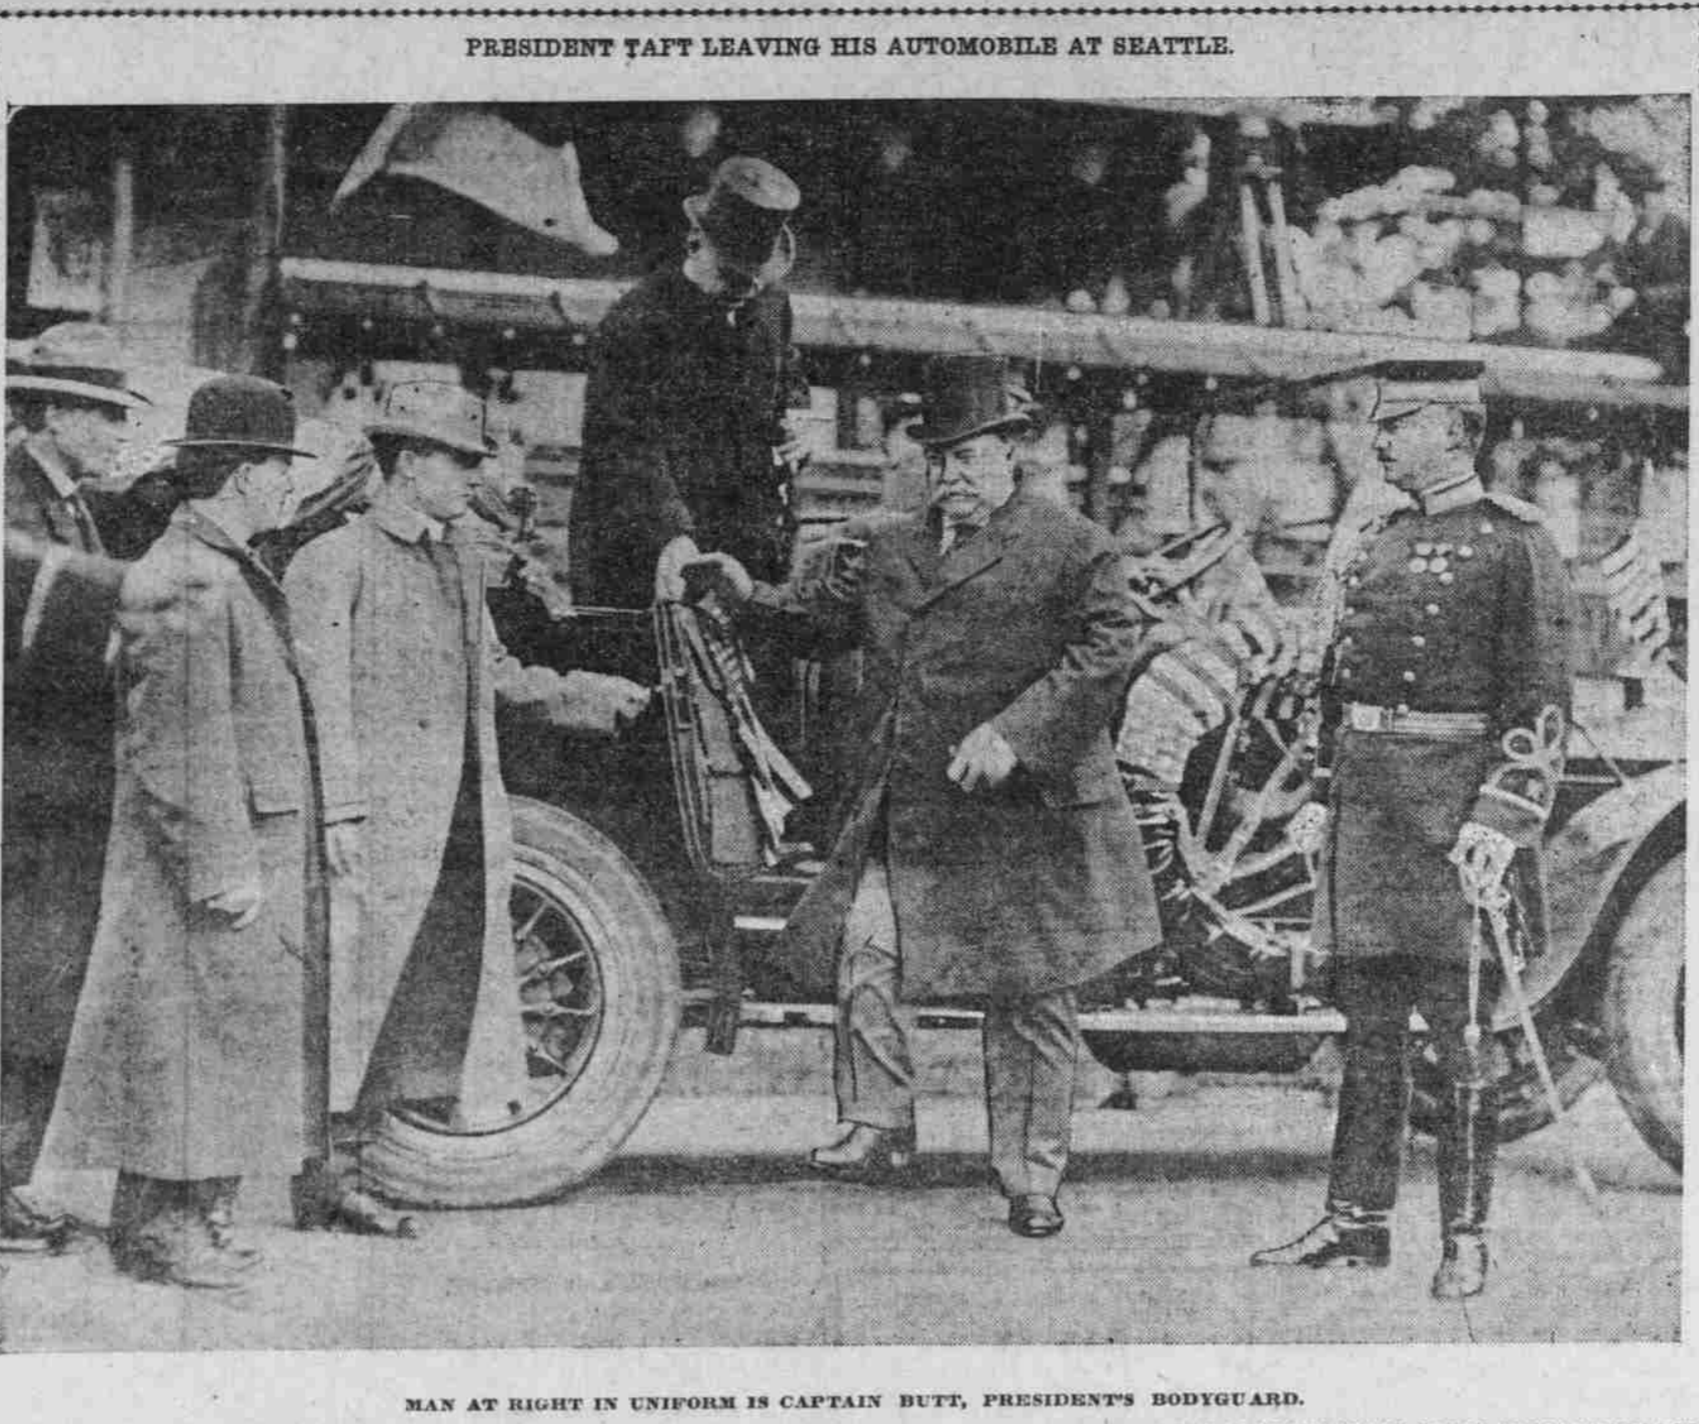

It is understood that the President will make no specific recommendations to Congress for legislation affecting the territory until after his visit. The President has taken particular pains to let it be known that he has a deep interest in Alaska, and that he feels the people there have been somewhat neglected in the past. His position in favor of Government help in building railroads to help open up the vast areas of territory has been received with enthusiasm.

Taft Talks of Cushman.

It was well after dark when the yacht bearing the President reached the wharf here. The entire waterfront was crowded and the streets leading to the Union Club were thronged with people. The crowd at the Armory tonight overflowed into the streets outside.

Work Exceedingly Heavy.

Mr. Smith, who has been engaged in railroad work in many different localities in this country and in the Andes in South America, says at some places along the route to the Deschutes and a gang of work exceeds anything he ever saw. "It is a country of wonderful scenery," said he yesterday, "and when Central Oregon is reached, the land presents vast possibilities. In the vicinity of Bend, anything that will grow in a temperate zone can be raised with the aid of irrigation. Once water is turned on the soil, vegetation springs up like magic. The people there are delighted over the certainty of a railroad, and the railroad man is welcomed with both hands."

OREGON TRUNK CHANGES

Relocates Survey on West Side of River While Harriman Line Will Follow East Bank Through Canyon, Avoiding Tunnel.

Conflicts in rights of way in the canyon of the Deschutes River between the Deschutes Railroad Company and the Oregon Trunk Line seem to be slowly but surely adjusting themselves.

Jackson Smith, vice-president of the Oregon Trunk Line, who has returned from a trip of inspection over the route of the road from the mouth of the Deschutes to Bend, states that the Oregon Trunk Line has relocated its route from Mile 23 to the vicinity of Sherar's bridge, a distance of 15 miles, so that it is now on the west side of the river.

The Oregon Trunk Line's original survey took the west side of the river at the mouth of the Deschutes and crossed over to the east side at Mile 23, then bill, and the new tariff commission; at Des Moines, Ia., he outlined his ideas of needed amendments to the Interstate Commerce and anti-trust laws; at Denver he devoted his remarks to the corporation tax and dwelt upon what he deemed its advantages in preference to a direct income tax; at Spokane, where the irrigation Congress had been held but a short time previous to his visit, the President discussed the conservation of natural resources and the reclamation of arid lands; and finally, at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, he gave his views regarding the future government of Alaska by a commission and came out flat-footed for a ship subsidy law.
