In many instances the public fancy and the findings of the fudges varied widely, since an unusually showy horse was sure of general applause, while some animal of less spectacular habits would probably win out on fine points. second prizes.

This afternoon the judging of children's ponless will be taken up at 2 o'clock sharp. This will be followed by varied classes of road horses. The night programme will be elaborate, including saddle and harness animals, delivery horses, heavy draft horses, cavalry horses, six-in-hand draft teams, polo ponies, five-gaited sad-dle horses and high jumpers.

Judges Satisfy All.

In awarding the blue, red and yellow ribbons, the coveted honors of every horse show, Judges McDonnell and Alley succeeded in giving satisfaction, for it was plainly apparent that the two ex-perts made their selections with care and

In the afternoon the programme was finished expeditiously, and the same pro-cedure marked the work of the judges in the evening. The night show, how-ever, was featured by the competition between four young women, and as one or the other gained an advantage of an extra ribbon in a different class, the big crowd applauded vehemently. The princi-pal struggle was between Miss Eleanor Laidiaw, of Spokane, who rode and drove her father's fine horses, and Miss-Lillian O'Brien, of Portland, who handled her horse, Flashlight, in several events and divided honors with Miss Luidiaw's Tsar.

Girl Rider Cheered.

ter of J. D. Farrell, of Scattle, rode and drove the Moor so successfully as to be awarded the blue ribbon in the combination class the spectators thoroughly approved of the judges' selection. Miss Farrell, though but a slip of a girl, showed she was amply able to handle horses, and many were astonished at her riding and driving.

Flashlight, owned and ridden by Miss Laid.

O'Brien, and Tsar, ridden by Miss Laid-law, came together on two occasions. The first time the Spokane girl was the victor, and Miss O'Brien was tendered the red ribben, but on the next meeting of the two handsome horses the Portland girl was victorious and bore off the blue ribbon triumphantix. Miss Bernice Baker, of Tacoma, who has entered a number of high-class horses, was singularly unfortunate in not being able to secure a blue ribbon yesterday. Her splendid gelding, Highland Gaines, lost the blue in one division by a narrow margin, for the judges were not able to deedde against her entry for several decide against her entry for several minutes. Miss Baker bore her defeats gracefully, and may yet experience the good fortune which followed her at last season's show.

Show Is Best Yet.

All of the events were keenly contested, and the class of entries is easily the best that has appeared at any horse show in the Northwest since the popular exposithe Northwest since the popular exposi-tions have been in vogue. Another fea-ture of last night's show was the clover drill given by 16 members of the riding classes of Professor Von Gilman's school. The maneuvers of the men and women riders were highly pleasing, and many regrets were expressed when the drill was curtailed to allow continuance of the indexing.

cowboy crestfallen and sick with envy to witness the graceful case with which the ladies in the saddle classes handle their mounts. For the judging requires trotting and galloping and the thorough-breds generally cannot resist the temptation to throw themselves about and cut up capers. The most troubled antics on the part of their mounts did not cause any of the ladies or misses the slightest concern yesterday.

Much Interest in Awards.

Interest quite as keen as in any hardfought competition attends the awarding of prizes. The person of first magnitude at the Oriental building is the one whose mount or team has taken a blue rosette, which is the emblem of first award. Red denotes second, yellow third and white fourth.

From now on until late Saturday night the judging will continue. The final sevent will be for the best type of harness horse, shown in hand, and the contest will be confined to winners of first and second prizes.

OLD FORMALITY UNKNOWN

Society Turns Out en Masse to View Equine Aristocracy-Occupants of Boxes Visit Between Numbers.

With each succeeding year of the Portland Hunt Club seems to eclipse its predecessors Such was the order last night, when the equine aristocracy vied with the stunning gowns of the women for supremacy. The stiff formality that charactorized the first year's show, and was in a measure repeated in the second, was last night entirely eliminated, seeming to have given way to an easy informality without which the success of a Horse Show is sine qua non. The display of gowns, jewels and furs was much in advance of last year, many creations of foreign make being in evidence, and it is apparent that social Portland is developing rapidly in the manner of Horse Show entertainments which have been such brilliant affairs in New York and abroad. There was much visiting among occupants of the various boxes, and promenad-ing was decidedly popular. Several tiers immediately behind the boxes had been removed for the occasion, thus making a wider thoroughfare, and en-abling the women to show to advantage

Sincerity Clothes are far above the average. But the prices aren't. We have been producing suits and overcoats with this label for thirty years-clothes that bear it will bear wear. If they fall short of expectation we won't. That's why it's so important to find the label. It's a pledge that the tailoring is right, and that the materials are dependable. You can judge for yourself of their fit and fitness.

Only one dealer in a town sells Sincerity Clothes the best dealer, because they're the best clothes."
