

PARSONS GOETS SENATORIAL TOGA

Planning to Make Trouble for Speaker Cannon During Next Session.

WAR WITH UP-STATE MEN

Representative From Manhattan Charges Deal Whereby Tammany's Strength Was Thrown to Presiding Officer of House.

BY LLOYD F. LONERGAN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—(Special.)—Behind the charges which Congressman Herbert Parsons has made against certain up-state leaders, who are accused of having entered into a corrupt bargain with Tammany, is the material for the prettiest kind of a fight for the Senate seat of Chauncey M. Depew.

Parsons is thoroughly convinced that his Mayoralty candidate, Otto Bannard, is doomed to defeat. He has already commenced to cry out and blame the up-state men for failing to pass the numerous election bills which he sent to Albany last session.

Parsons says that there was a plot entered into between Tammany Hall legislators and "Cannon Republicans" in return for the defeat of election laws. Parsons wanted, so Parsons claims, the Democratic organization agreed to throw its votes at Washington to Cannon, who was hard pressed.

Fitzgerald Coppers Good Thing.

But Fitzgerald saw a chance to land on good committees. He is now on the rules committee, a position that has not been accorded to any other man in the House. Parsons wanted, so Parsons claims, the Democratic organization agreed to throw its votes at Washington to Cannon, who was hard pressed.

"I know nothing of any deal," says Fitzgerald, earnestly, "and it is incredible that there could have been any deal. There were some rumors in circulation, of course, while the fight for control was going on, but the amendments that I presented at that time were the result of conviction."

"I did not believe it wise to place the duties of the Speaker in the hands of a committee, and I told the Democratic members so before they voted on any deal. That I should be involved in any such deal as Parsons talks about is absurd, for my feelings toward Tammany are well known."

Assaults Up-State Men.

The men who are most bitterly assailed by Parsons are John Raines, Republican leader in the State Senate, and Congressman George Malby, of St. Lawrence County, one of the really influential men in the upper end of the Empire State.

It is an interesting fact that both of these men are already on record as opposing the elevation of Parsons from the lower house of congress to the Senate. And under ordinary circumstances, they will have a great deal to say regarding the identity of Depew's successor.

Parsons has had his eye on a Senatorial toga for many years. He wanted to be a candidate a year ago, and tearfully withdrew when Roosevelt practically dictated the selection of Elihu Root. But he believed that he had things arranged for a triumph, and that when the Legislature met in January, 1911, he would be hailed as the man to be sent to Washington for six years of term.

But since Congress adjourned, Parsons has heard some disquieting news. He had participated in several skirmishes with the Cannon forces, and his acquiescence was told that the Speaker's friends did not think that he was a safe man. Also that the rural leaders thought that the metropolitan district should be content with one Senator, Mr. Roof.

Down in Cannon Column.

The up-state delegation to Congress has always been unwaveringly "regular." Every time there has been a fight, both sides have unhesitatingly put the rural Congressmen down in the Cannon column. The up-state men are also politicians of standing in their respective communities, and have a distressing habit of ruling the delegates to the various conventions, while the State Senators and Assemblymen usually cut out of their hands. And the fact that they were opposed to him was unpleasant news to Parsons.

To be nominated, he must have the support of up-state men. At the present time there are 23 Republicans in the Senate, and only three of these come from New York County. In the lower house are 99 Republican Assemblymen, of whom nine are representatives of Manhattan. So it can easily be seen that Parsons, if he relies on his own constituents exclusively, is very far from having even a decent representation in the legislative caucus.

The defection of Raines, Malby, Sereno Payne and others who usually follow them would be enough to put Parsons out of the running for higher honors, and he thoroughly realizes that fact. So he is doing the best he knows how to stir up their constituents, and really believes that his crusade will prove a success.

Thirsts for Trouble.

It is Parsons' plan to stir up all the trouble possible. He figures that if Bannard is defeated, he will be able to lay the blame on the broad shoulders of the up-state men, who failed to properly aid the party in the section where it was weak and needed all the aid that it could legitimately receive. Should he happen to win it will be despite the handicap of "designing men" who put the interests of Uncle Joe Cannon above the necessities of their own clan in New York State.

If Parsons carries out his present ideas, he will go into the state convention next Fall, and raise a terrible rumpus. He will court defeat, and probably be accommodated. Then if the election goes wrong, but the Legislature is saved, he will be in the position of being the proper man for the party to honor, as the one who had given warning beforehand of what was bound to happen.

Parsons has confided to his friends that to carry out his ideas it will be necessary for him to raise $250,000 during the next session of Congress. He realizes thoroughly that he is a marked man, from the Cannon standpoint, and that his only salvation is to be a very naughty insurgent.

Backed by Manhattan.

In any action that he may take, Parsons will be supported by the two other Republicans from Manhattan, Oloffe and Bennett. These two have usually lined up with the organization, but now they must do as Parsons says, unless they are anxious to be denied a re-nomination.

for the county chairman is in absolute control of the local organization. Cannon's friends say that they are glad that Parsons has come out into the open against their leader. For over a year, they say, they have been suspicious of him. Parsons made no secret of his disapproval of the handling of the tariff bill. At one time it was believed that he was ready to vote against the measure, but at the last moment he and his faithful followers wheeled into line, although they permitted it to be understood that they thought that a great mistake had been committed.

Speaker Cannon charges that the outbreak of Parsons is due to disappointment over a failure to land committee assignments to which he had laid claim, but which were denied him. Parsons asked last session to be placed on the committee on foreign and interstate commerce, made vacant by the promotion of Vice-President Sherman, and it is not denied that the Speaker told him that he (Parsons) was already well provided, and that he had no right to demand higher honors.

Friend Bennet Punished.

But the friends of the New York City leader say that not only was Parsons ignored, but his close friend Bennet of Manhattan was punished because of his loyalty to his leader.

Bennet was the ranking member of the committee on Indian lands, and was in line for the chairmanship, when Congressman Chasman died. Instead of re-promoting Bennet was dropped from the committee entirely, and given an obscure place on the committee on Indian lands. The explanation, according to the New York men, is that both Parsons and Bennet were punished because of their support of President Roosevelt in his secret service fight.

When Speaker Cannon made his charge that Parsons was influenced by interested motives in his attack on the Cannon-Tammany combination, so called, Parsons demonstrated his reply that he is prepared to lead a bitter war in the House this winter.

"The Speaker is always complaining that so many men are cowardly," he remarked. "He can hardly criticize me if I try to follow his advice and show some courage. I stand by my original statement that there was a deal between some up-state Republicans and Tammany men, to get support for Cannon and the rules in the House of Representatives. I am not surprised that some people object to my statement, but I cannot agree with them that it means the ruin of the grand old party of which I have been a member ever since I have had a vote."

Parsons' bold defiance of the present ruling powers in the National party has led to the suggestion in some quarters that he expects that Theodore Roosevelt will soon return, to resume control of the organization, and to save him (Parsons) from further humiliation at the hands of Cannon and his friends.

In all quarters it is agreed that he has run straight into the biggest hornet's nest that the Republicans have encountered in a decade. It is also certain that before the buzzing ceases, a number of persons who have not heretofore been mentioned will probably be badly "stung."

IDAHO SEES CEMENT

MONSTER PLANT TO BE LOCATED AT OROFINO.

Company With Capital of $3,000,000 Buys Land and Announces Plans.

OROFINO, Idaho, Oct. 12.—(Special.)

—Establishment of the largest cement factory in the United States, capitalized at $3,000,000, entailing an initial expenditure of a million and a half, and the construction of a single roof covering 12 acres is assured by developments today, the deeds for the time and clay beds almost in the town of Orofino have been completed.

At the head of this corporation is J. S. Irvin, of Ottawa, Canada, managing director and head of the International Portland Cement Company, capitalized at $2,000,000, and of the Ex-Shaw Portland Cement Company of Alberta.

Dana Childs, a Spokane millionaire, is heavily interested, as is C. A. Reid, vice-president of the Union Fuel & Ice Company of Spokane, who will be general manager of the plant.

R. B. Klossner, engineer in charge, and E. J. Klossner, his assistant, have completed the survey for the plant. Three hundred men will be employed, turning out 2500 barrels of cement daily. Storage rooms will be built for 30,000 barrels of the finished product, 20,000 barrels of clinkers and 20,000 barrels of lime and clay.

Two hundred and twenty-three acres have been purchased containing a lime and clay bed of which Engineer Hassan says: "I've dreamed of such things, but never before saw them in existence."

CRUISERS TO COME HOME

General Change Ordered in Composition of Asiatic Squadron.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Important changes are to be made in the composition of the Pacific fleet, now in Asiatic waters, about December 1.

The protected cruisers Denver, Chattanooga, Galveston and Cleveland are to come home and their places will be taken by the Albany, New Orleans, Cincinnati and Raleigh.

The Denver will sail from the Asiatic station for Mare Island, via Guam and Honolulu, about December 1. She will be replaced by the Albany, which will sail from San Francisco early in December.

The Chattanooga, Galveston and Cleveland are coming home coming from the New Orleans, Cincinnati and Raleigh are ready for service.

The New Orleans is expected to get away from Mare Island in January and the Cincinnati and the Raleigh, both at Mare Island, are to be commissioned in April or possibly earlier. The Denver and Cleveland will go to Mare Island for repairs and the Chattanooga to Puget Sound for the same purpose.
