Oregon Trust Funds to That Amount Disappeared in a Night.

JURY MAY INDICT

Directors of Wildcat Bank Will Probably Be Held Responsible for Reckless Looting of Depositors' Cash in Final Report.

After spending the day yesterday delving into the mysterious disappearance of $50,000 in cash which was taken from the bank in one night, and which has never been accounted for, the grand jury which is devoting its entire time to probing into the wreck of the Oregon Trust and Savings Bank, was forced to adjourn for the day without having come to any conclusion as to who took this enormous sum of the depositors' money.

Withesass were examined, even the teller who had charge of the biotter on which the record of the bank's total cash was kept, but no information was secured which threw any light upon this apparent which threw any light upon this apparent theft and one of the most sensational features of the investigation.

During the day W. Cooper Morris, the cashier, now living in Tacoma, was informed that he might appear before the grand jury if he wished. No reply from Mr. Morris has yet been received. When the time comes it is guite probable that all of the directors will be given the opportunity of either voluntarily appearing beof the directors with he given the oppor-tunity of either voluntarily appearing be-fore the grand jury or of being subpe-maed. Although no evidence showing who had got away with the $50,000 was brought unlawful handling of the savings depos-fus and the general deposits developed which makes the situation look all the more disagreeable for the directors.

All Funds Were Jumbled.

Long & Sweek, who had appeared the day before, and who were attorneys for the bank, produced a copy of the bylaws of the defunct institution, which had bedistributed for the public to read, with the evident intention of creating confi-dence in the institution. Among these rules it was stipulated that all savings deposits were to be kept absolutely sep-arate from the general deposits, segre-gated in the bank, and invested only in municipal bonds or in real estate first mortgages. Teller Smith, who restified the day before, was recalled to show that all the money in the bank was indiscrimi-nately mixed up and drawn upon as

"All money looked alike to me," is the way Smith is said to have described the case. He said that he had received no orders to segregate the funds, and that all checks had been paid out as they were presented, until the money was exhausted. Some of the funds were paid out upon checks written by officials of the Receiver Devin was called upon to produce the blotter of the bank upon the provided this document, which is a tell-er's statement of the bank's cash. Mr. ith, after seeing the entry, said that it was not in his handwriting and that it had been made by another teller, H. A. Graves, now in California. Mr. Smith mays that this entry had been made at night, after he had left the bank, and that inquired about it the next morning and given what he supposed was a satisfac-tory explanation of the entry.

It has also been shown that apparently $75,000 of the personal notes of Mr. Moore and Mr. Morris were withdrawn upon this same day, without security being placed in their stead. This caused the jury to ask many questions.

Bank Was Never Solvent.

From the evidence shown by the experte the bank was insolvent from the day opened its doors, and upon this one item slone it is believed that the inquisitoria sione it is, believed that the inquisitorial body will return a finding against the directors. This fact is said to have made a great impression upon the jury, the legal opinion upon it being that all of the directors who may have served at any time during the history of the bank may be held responsible, as the laws requiring solvency are very strict.

The question of whether any of the charges brought against the bank officials have been outlawed has also been considered by the jury, and the only dif-ficulty found by the lapse of time before beginning the investigation is the loss of papers which might have been produced at the time the bank falled, and of which there is now apparently no trace. Among these are the minutes of the board of utes of the board, the District Attorney's office points out, is an indication that there are recorded in them some data which might reflect upon this body and that the record was removed purposely. Some of the witnesses have also moved into other states, but in other respects the secution of the bank officials, if bills be impeded in any way by the limitation summoned to appear before the jury to-day for the purpose of assisting the jury to a more perfect understanding of the falsified and other entries presented to them by the experts.

She said that because of the visit of her son, a young man of 20, Squires had grown jealous of the young man's preference for his mother, and had visited her and made threats.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Kimball swore she plainly saw Squires on the night of the assault. Squires produced his pres-ent wife, his niece and two other people who swore that Squires was in his house at Rose City Park on the night and hour of the assault. The attorneys for the defense attempted to make it appear that the injuries upon Mrs. Kimball were selfinflicted and that the charge against her former husband had been brought out of spite.
