

EXPERTS LOSE ALL HOPE FOR MINERS

Rescuers Forced to Abandon Work When Another Fire Is Discovered.

MINE'S MOUTH SEALED

President Earling Refuses to Give Up—Chemicals and Steam to Be Used in Combating Flames. Thousand Orphans Mourn.

CHERRY, Ill., Nov. 15.—The 300 or more miners entombed in the St. Paul mine by last Saturday's catastrophe are dead. Some of the bodies lie buried beneath thousands of tons of earth which caved in upon them. These will never be recovered.

Rescuers Revive Hope.

Hope hung in the balance today. Before the fire broke out rescuers descended four times. Then the rumor circulated quickly through the crowds that the men below ground had been reached and that the reason they were not brought up at once was that they were exhausted by lack of food and smoke.

"They're alive; they're alive," cried hopeful mothers and wives. "They'll be brought up pretty soon."

Doomed Men Not Found.

The miners must have crawled into recesses most remote from the fire, and to these parts rescuers were unable to go. Fire broke out afresh and the crowd about the mouth of the shaft began to thin as hope seemed to wane.

President Earling, of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, declined to commit himself as to the fate of the men.

Fan Starts Blaze.

At an early hour the main shaft, which has been sealed since Saturday, was opened and a determined effort was begun to release the living miners or take the bodies from the wreckage.
