

WOMAN SAYS SHE MARRIED HAMILTON

Allegations Which Would Make Embezzler a Bigamist Also Being Investigated.

NO PROOF IS YET FOUND

Woman Gives Circumstantial Account of Alleged Wedding, and Washington Authorities Are Making Investigation.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Nov. 22.—(Special.)—Charges which lay Oris Hamilton open to suspicion of bigamy are being investigated by officials here. Thus far nothing has been found to substantiate them, and only the accusation is tangible. This accusation is made by a woman known variously as Norah Hamilton and Nellie Allen. Just after the report of Hamilton's marriage to an Adjutant-General, she was located in Oregon and for a time was mistaken for Hazel Moore.

Calling herself Norah Hamilton, she came to Olympia about two years ago and registered at a local hotel as Mrs. Oris Hamilton. Friends of the Adjutant-General, then Hamilton's real wife, who is now at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, appealed to the police and Norah was forced to leave town.

Investigation of Hamilton's personal check books showed that he had been sending money to two women, presumably this one and Hazel Moore. Recently letters have been received at the Executive offices here asking information as to when the Hamilton trial would begin. These letters came from Denver and were signed "May Allen," whose address was given as "General delivery."

The Spokane police report that Norah Hamilton is known there and that she gave the name May Allen once when arrested there. Detective MacDonald, of Spokane, says Norah told him she was the wife of Hamilton and claimed to have been married to him at Seattle in 1907 by Father McGrath, a Catholic priest.

The investigation of the King County records shows that an Edward L. Perry and May Nellie Allen were married by Father McGrath, August 6, 1907, on Terrace street, Seattle, the witnesses to the ceremony being M. J. Coffy and Kate Reid. Father McGrath is now said to be a resident of Tacoma.

The Supreme Court today set aside the habeas corpus writ granted on behalf of Oris Hamilton, which fixed a hearing December 3, before the local Superior Court. But in his order Chief Justice Rudkin gave attorneys for Hamilton permission to present a new application for habeas corpus to the entire bench of the Supreme Court tomorrow morning, and this will be done.

Saturday's order of the Supreme Court granting the writ was considered highly satisfactory by the defense and today's proceedings and the prosecution jubilant.

The original writ was granted by Chief Justice Rudkin in chambers on an ex parte application of Hamilton's attorneys. This morning Assistant Attorney-General Magill made application to Judge Rudkin to set aside the order and later in the day the best arguments were advanced by attorneys for both sides, after which he dissolved his writ without prejudice.

Hamilton's trial is set for hearing tomorrow in the Superior Court and the state attorney for the state believes the Supreme Court tomorrow will deny habeas corpus and assert they believe the state will be able to go ahead with the criminal trial.

But, if release is denied, by the Supreme Court tomorrow, it is known that attorneys for Hamilton will ask the writ of error to the United States Court and seek to delay the jury trial the several years necessary in an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Hamilton in the Superior Court today pleaded not guilty to informations charging him with forgery and with obtaining money under false pretenses.

WIFE'S HEART HOG FOOD

Mrs. Keef Makes Startling Accusations Against Husband.

ALBANY, Or., Nov. 22.—(Special.)—That her husband told her she and her whole family ought to have their hearts cut out and carried to the hogs is the allegation of Stella M. Keef in a complaint for divorce filed against Michael Keef today. Keef is alleged to have remarked that it would pay him to sacrifice his life to kill the whole outfit, meaning his wife and her father and brothers, even if he had to die with the noose around his neck for so doing.

Mrs. Keef also asserts that her husband told her she ought to have her eyes dug out and that he actually threatened to kill her on different occasions. She alleges that on November 13 her husband told her he would throw kerosene over her and set her afire.

Mr. and Mrs. Keef separated November 12 and she says she fled to escape being killed. On the following day she procured Keef's arrest on a charge of assault and battery. He was found guilty in a local Justice Court and fined $20.

Mrs. Keef asks for $500 for expenses of the suit, $50 per month for maintenance during the pendency of the suit and $2500 permanent alimony.

WINANS BLOCKS DITCH

FILES ON WATER FOR POWER PLANT AT HOOD RIVER.

Irrigation Company Has Conflict, and State Engineer Is Asked to Straighten Tangle.

SALEM, Or., Nov. 22.—(Special.)—Whether several thousand acres of land in the Hood River Valley shall be irrigated or not depends on the agreement made by the state through State Engineer Lewis with W. R. Winans, who proposes to build a belt electric line and to obtain power from Hood River.

The Hood River irrigation district has a segregation of about 500 acres and has already expended $100,000 for a canal from Dead Point Creek, a tributary of Hood River. This project has not been entirely successful, owing to insufficiency of water, and the corporation proposes to issue $40,000 in bonds and extend its canal to Green Point Creek.

On the bench lands of the west side of Hood River Valley are several thousand acres which can be placed under irrigation by construction of a high-line ditch. Two thousand acres are included in the irrigation district project now under way. Managers would apply for the water prior to the application of Winans, who wants to harness the river for power purposes, but this does not go toward straightening out the matter, since there is some question as to the legality of the procedure under which the ditch company's filing was made.

TRAIN WRECKED ENGINEE KILLED

Rogers Dies in Agony After Sending Messages to His Wife and Mother.

TRACKWALKER TO BLAME

Leaves Post Just Before Freight on O. R. & N. Reaches Soft Track and Falls to Give Warning of Danger.

Wrecking of the Portland-Chicago fast freight No. 55, on the O. R. & N., which was due to arrive in Portland at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, resulted from a landslide near Bonneville, when Thomas F. Rogers, the engineer, was killed, and J. A. Nesbitt, fireman, and W. T. Purions, brakeman, were slightly injured.

A board of inquiry placed the blame on a trackwalker, who left his post of duty at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, some time before the train arrived, thus failing to flag the train and give information regarding the dangerous condition of the road resulting from the heavy rains.

ROGERS DIES IN AGONY

Rogers stayed at his post and met a horrible death, living for one hour and 40 minutes after his face was scalded by the escaping steam. He was pinned under an overturned locomotive and a number of tralmen and others from the neighborhood stood helplessly by and watched him die in agony, without any means of reaching him.

Although his back and legs were broken and his face scalded, Rogers was able to talk before dying, and his last words were a message to his wife and mother. He wanted the men who stood near him to tell those two that he was spiritually prepared for the death that was near him, and he sent his love to both.

The death of Rogers, coming as it did three months after his promotion to the position of engineer, was looked upon by his associates as being unusually pathetic. He was a young man of only about 30 years and had worked his way to promotion through several years of patient toil. Four years ago he was married, and his death yesterday not only made his wife a widow, but also made orphans of two little boys, who waited in vain yesterday for the homecoming of their father.

PARENTS GONE IN SEARCH OF HEALTH

Rogers' mother and father are both invalids, and in search of better health they left last Wednesday night for Los Angeles. Telegrams were sent yesterday to San Francisco and Los Angeles to notify them of the sudden death of their son, and the police of both cities were asked to aid in locating them.

TRACKS AGAIN CLEARED

Until late last night but few details of the accident could be obtained, owing to the storm having been in progress. When it seemed that the track would not be opened for traffic, it was planned to send the eastbound train by way of the North Bank road, but just before this plan was ready to materialize it was learned that the track was cleared and the trains were dispatched, although a little behind their regular schedules, on the O. R. & N. track.
