3235 CARS DELAYED

Drawbridge Operations Stop Traffic 45 Hours. SIX-DAY RECORD IS KEPT

Statistics Show Big Loss of Time in Crossing Willamette River During Business Days—Table Figures Won't Lie, Says Railway.

Not including Sunday, the records compiled by the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company for the week ended Wednesday show that the operation of the draws on the three Willamette River bridges, 2325 streetcars were delayed, in the aggregate, 45 hours 3 1/2 minutes.

These statistics cover the operation of draws only between the hours of 6 A. M. and 7 and 7:30 P. M., an average of 12 hours daily. This is a daily average of 539 cars delayed, with an aggregate delay representing actual loss of time in operation of 7 1/2 hours.

Of the three bridges, the steel bridge leads with an aggregate loss of time of 19 hours and 30 seconds, involving the delay of 946 cars. Second comes the Burnside bridge with an aggregate delay of 15 hours 57 1/2 minutes, interrupting the operation of 1169 cars.

Table Shows Results. The following table shows the time consumed daily for the six days in the operation of the draws together with the number of cars delayed thereby on each of the three bridges.

Justice Bell's Court Scene of Unusual Excitement Over $89. Alleged to Be Due Woman.

Mrs. Muldoon's Daughter Star Witness. James Bayliss, formerly employed in this city as an agent for the Buick automobile, but who has more recently been a salesman for the French bank of the Dalles, Or., was today on the stand in Justice Bell's court.

Justice Bell's Court Scene of Unusual Excitement Over $89. Alleged to Be Due Woman. Mrs. Muldoon's 20-year-old daughter played the part of the star witness. When asked to take the stand and tell what she knew the young woman said:

"Well, I know that while he was working and making money for the automobile company, he ran up a bill for $82.50 with us and kept putting us off with promises, and while he had money he went about with women to support the restaurants and to the theaters and keep them out on automobile rides. I saw him out in automobiles myself. I had him sized up for one of those rounders, and I guess I know."

Because Mrs. Muldoon was uncertain about the contents of a suitcase of clothing which Bayliss removed from the house without her permission, Justice Bell held that technically Bayliss had not been proved guilty, and allowed him to go. Bayliss said that he would send all of the money he owed to Mrs. Muldoon as soon as he earned it.

When the new administration took charge, numerous contractors were far behind in their work. The first action came before the street committee for extensions. It finally became the policy of the committee to grant such extensions only if accompanied by a plan of holding future contracts to the letter, unless some excellent excuse was offered. The committee showed by its action yesterday that it will enforce contracts.

Miles testified that he owed McKean some money and that the draft which McKean had drawn upon him had never reached him.

When William Deblols Woodman applied to Deputy County Clerk Wilde a few days ago to take out his naturalization papers, he was handed a blank form to fill out. It contained only seven lines for the names of his children, however, while it was necessary for him to enter the names of 11.

This is the largest family ever naturalized since County Clerk Fields has been in office, according to Deputy Wilde. Another prospective citizen made application some time ago, but became frightened when he saw the seven lines for children, as he had 14. He has not returned.

Woodman is 56 years old and his wife is 52. He was born at Allerton, Prince Edward Island, and went to San Francisco in 1882, from Wellington, New Zealand.

Harbor-master Speler Prosecutes Two Owners of Floating Shacks. Harbor-master Speler was the complainant yesterday morning in Municipal Court against James Murphy and John Shank, two scow-dwellers with floating shacks at the foot of Mill street. After repeated notice to leave the city limits had been disregarded the harbor-master caused the arrest of the two men.
