Southern California Oranges Severely Hurt by Frost.

The latest information on orange crop conditions in California is contained in the circular of Edgar A. Wright, dated Los America, January 5. It says:

circular of Edgar A. Wright, dated Loa Angelea, January S. H says:

The situation out here is very bad and in the lisars of the citrus belt the dampare from freet hise issen very great. Surely 50 per cent of the oranges in Southern Callfornia has been touched and the packers themselves say that 25 per cent of it will never be shipped. There is no longer any doubt about the matter, for the Trult is entring dry, and that is the one sure test. No doshs some of the inside fruit on trees that have been hort will be all right, but this osamet always be separated from the poor stuff, sind it looks as though the East was in five a food of frost-bitten stock.

I believe that there are very many sections of the citrus country that are very nearly, if not wholly humaine, and that you can still buy good fruit there. I know that I could had some. If you buy for cash and hay for good, humaine fruit, it would be well to be careful. Your proker should know this "scared" stock and let it alone. If you want to buy this kind of fruit with your ways open, that is sincther matter. You can get it cheap enough, as it is going at down to $1 a box.
