VOICE FINDS TONGUE

Strange Converts Profess Knowledge of Holy Ghost.

RELIGION IS ACROBATIC

Crowded Room Helps Enthusiasts to "Sweat Out Sin"—Man to Whom Gift Is Denied Replines When Not Called.

Some jumped up and down. Some gibbered meaningless syllables. Others spoke fluently in what they termed "language," and all professed to be receiving knowledge of the Holy Ghost. They were members of what they themselves call the Apostolic Faith. There were few more than 30. The room on Union avenue, between Ash and Ankeny streets, was stifling hot—heat evidently being a necessity of the religion, for it was announced that "they would sweat the sin out of themselves." A week ago the antics of the Apostolic Faith people became so pronounced, that the efforts of the police were required to quell the enthusiasm. On Saturday the police were not required. The meeting opened with a simple prayer given by an old man known as Winters. He seemed prosperous seated beside Winters on the rostrum were a silent old woman and a motherly matron who said that she had the gift of tongues. The congregation believed that when the receptive mood came the Spirit would confer the gift, repeating Biblical history. Enthusiasm was heightened by the singing of hymns, on the revival order. In the midst of the last of these an old woman fervently prayed for the help in the future that she had received in the past. A man with a voice of power conversed her with exclamations. "If I had a thousand tongues," reiterated the old lady. "I could not give him praise." The congregation seemed electrified. Each looked at his neighbor. The woman stopped. "Peeble, peeble, peeble," she repeated, in a low tone. A hundred times she said this, and proceeded with her prayer. An allusion to the thousand tongues again had the effect of causing her to return to the gibberish. "She has the gift of tongues," it was whispered. The man with the voice looked bored. He seemed to want to get into things himself. He tried once, but the woman would not give place. Finally he got his chance. He began by leaping several feet high half a dozen times in "succession." He laughed loudly. He prayed. In the midst of his prayer he suddenly turned into an incomprehensible jumble of words of no language comprehended these. He resumed in English, then returned to some thing that was not recognizable as language. "I speak the pronunciation of the Lord," he said at the close. "He understands and he knows." The man of the Voice ended with more acrobatics. He was subdued the rest of the session. Another man unable to speak intelligible English took the floor. He quivered all over. The quivering was said to signify the entrance of the Holy Ghost. When he asserted that he had spoken Chinese there was noise to dispute him. The motherly old lady began to promenade up and down. When all eyes were focused on her, she did a modified form of ballet dance. Even the most devout, although trying to look subdued, smiled. The old lady declaimed. She did not appear to be understood. She said that her message was for some one to understand.

AGED OREGON PIONEER DIES AT PORTLAND HOSPITAL

Joseph Randall Kerr Irvin, aged 74 years, an Oregon pioneer, died at the Good Samaritan Hospital, Thursday. Mr. Irvin crossed the plains to Oregon as a boy, in 1852, coming to Lane County and settling at Oakville. He was kidnapped by the Indians during the journey, but was later rescued by the members of the party with whom he crossed. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in the Union Army and served until the close. After the war he engaged in the transfer business here under the name of the Pacific Transfer Company. Later he conducted the Ocean House at Newport. Or. He was a member of George Wright Post, Grand Army of the Republic. Mr. Irvin is survived by D. S. Irvin, of Salem, and S. R. Irvin, brother; one son, W. A. Irvin, of Salem, and a daughter.

HENEY'S REST NIGH

Prosecutor May Finish Hermann Case Today.

ONLY ONE POINT SCORED

Defense to Ask Dismissal, Contending Conspiracy Is Not Shown. Washington Witness to Be Called Is Deaf.

Special Prosecutor Heney announces that he is nearing the end of the Government's case against Binger Hermann, ex-Commissioner of the General Land Office, and that the prosecution will probably rest its case today. The Government has relied upon circumstantial evidence to a large degree in the prosecution of Hermann and Heney has brought out only one point against the defendant—the telegram from Hermann to Mays, in which Mays was apprised that the reserve had been created by the Secretary of the Interior. At the Washington trial of the case accusing Herman of burning certain letter press copybooks, the defendant denied that he had communicated with Mays concerning the forest reserve. Hermann's telegram to Mays was used by the Government to contradict the defendant's former testimony. Washington Witness Deaf. J. M. McVean, of Washington, will probably be called as the Government's witness in the trial. Now he is in charge of the department of claims in the forestry division of the Department of Agriculture, but in 1902 McVean was a clerk in a division of the General Land Office, having charge of forest reserve subjects. It is said that McVean had several conversations with Hermann over the creation of the Blue Mountain reserve. He was also a witness at the Washington trial. Then, when placed on the stand, it was found that he was deaf, and having left his "ear telephone" at home, it was impossible for the witness to hear the loudest objections registered by counsel for Hermann, Attorney Worthington, who is defending Hermann now. McVean was asked a question. Learning over the rail of the witness box, he fastened his eyes on the stenographer and began filling the record with evidence which Attorney Worthington desired to exclude by objection. The attorney objected, but McVean went right ahead with his story. McVean was finally shut off by a court bailiff, but the damage had been done. Attorney Worthington, upon hearing that

FRUIT INSPECTOR FINDS GROWERS WILLING TO ACT.

Rumor of Poor Fruit on Front Street May Call Stansbery Home This Week.

SPRAYING IS POPULAR

Mr. Stansbery has not been able to visit every orchard, but goes into a community and encourages several growers to spray, with the result that their example is followed by others and most of the trees are being sprayed. The inspector says that he has found the growers of fruit generally willing to spray their trees when told to do so, and for the first time the fruit trees in Multnomah County are being cleaned. However, Mr. Stansbery has found it necessary to cut down some trees. He said yesterday that he had been informed that since he has been absent inspecting trees in the outskirts some poor fruit has been seen on Front

U. S. vs. Beef Trust

Today there will convene in Chicago a body of men, a grand jury, who will be called upon to listen to the crimes of the Beef Trust. We predict that if the truth is not squashed—if the truth is made public—you will be appalled at the doings of this monstrous aggregation of money and power which were about to make the American nation a race of pigmies, underfed and starvelings. You notice that the men implicated bear the names SWISS MORRIS ARMOUR These men tell the butchers at what price they must sell meat! These men, who do $700,000,000 a year, aim to tell you what you must pay for your meat! It's up to the public everywhere not to eat the Beef Trust's meat. The man who sells the Beef Trust meat is nothing more than the Beef Trust's agent. Patronize the man by the very plain name of Smith, who has fought the Beef Trust in Portland for the last four years.

FISBECK AGAIN IN TOILS

Man and Wife, Well Known to Police, Under Two Charges.

DETECTIVES' VIGIL REWARDED.

A vigil of 24 hours by Detectives Craddock and Mallett was rewarded yesterday by the arrest of Louis Shafer on a charge of larceny. On Saturday evening a man was seen to steal a roll of beef from the West Side Lumber Company and then seen to cache it at the foot of Mill street. The detectives were called and after waiting patiently in refiles, saw Shafer go last night to the scene and remove the stolen goods. As

BEER BOTTLES, SOME OF WHICH WERE EMPTY, THOUGH CONTAINING EVIDENCE OF RECENT OPENING, WERE CONFISCATED.

Several beer bottles, some of which were empty, though containing evidence of recent opening, were confiscated. The charges of selling liquor on Sunday and without a license were placed against them.
