ASSISTANCE OF CLEARING HOUSE IS DECLINED.

German-American Company Has New Plan for Settlement of Oregon Trust Affairs.

tion of the negotiations between the Clearing-House Association and the directors of the German-American Bank was made yesterday afternoon at 4:20 o'clock, following a meeting of the association. President MacRee, of the association,

"The Clearing-House Association has just passed a resolution that the German-American directors, through Mr. Willis, have declined the proffered assistance of have declined the proffered assistance of the clearing-house, thus discharging the committee which was handling the nego-tiations. This brings the matter to an end so far as the clearing-house is con-cerned."

Further than this, Mr. MacRea refused by discuss the deal.

Further than this, Mr. MacRea refused to discuss the deal.

S. G. Reed, president of the German-American Bank, and P. L. Willis, who have been financing the deal, both declined to discuss the attitude of the clearing-house, and would make no statement of the situation further than to admit that other negotiations were pending with a view toward settling up the affairs of the old Oregon Trust & Savings Bank by Saturday. Saturday.

From the fact that the directors of the German-American have securities the value of which far exceeds the $30,000 of unpaid claims which remain unsettled, it is thought some arrangement will be per-fected within a few days whereby all of these depositors will be assured of their cash payments.

Shasta Limited Crew up Against Odd Puzzle

Engineers of Harriman Crack Train to Sound Points Try to Solve Mys. tery of Their Always Being First at Sidings.

66 OR ways that are dark and tricks that are vain, the heathen Chine is peculiar," according to Bret Harte. This may be all true, but if you ask any of the members of the crew of the Shasta Limited about such things they will tell you that the Northern Pacific engineers have the proverbial Chinaman beaten both ways at once. Under the new trackage agreement, the Shasta Limited runs from Portland to Seattle, and part of the way, from Vancouver to Tacoma, it uses the Northern Pacific tracks, peculiar," according to Bret Harte tracks.

In common with the Northern Pacific trains the limited on this section of its run is operated under what is known as the A B C block system. As it passes each station the engineer gets running orders to the next station, these being handed to him from a "clip" by the station agent. These orders often contain instructions to pass a certain Northern Pacific train at some siding out in the country; and railroad etiquette demands that the crew of the train first reaching a siding shall get out and throw the switches at either end, so that the second train will not have to stop. And if there is anything the average passenger brakeman hates, it is to get out unlock and throw switches, pass his train along, throw the switch back again, and then chase up the track after the last car as his train gathers headway.

Between Portland and Tacoma the Shasta Limited is the crack train of the run. It has the fastest schedule, and it averages over 30 miles an hour for the entire trip. Northern Pacific crews have strict orders not to hold it up by being late at passing points; but the Northern Pacific engineers know their road thoroughly, and can calculate to a nicelty the length of time it will take the Shasta train to run from point to the Shasta train to run from point to point. The result is that the Shasta Limited always reaches the sidings just a few seconds before the Northern Pa-cific trains, and the Shasta crew has to offic trains, and the Shasta crew has to pile out, regardless of weather, and throw switches. As soon as this is done the Northern Pacific train looms in sight, rushes past on its clear track, and its engineer, conductor and brakeman lean out of the cab and vestibules and wave laughing greetings at the Shash men standing at the switches.

The engineers of the Oregon & Wash-lagion trains are doing their best to so ington trains are doing their best to so time their arrival at passing points as to force the Northern Pacific men in first upon the sidings; but so far they have not succeeded. With only a minute of leeway at passing points it requires a thorough knewledge of the road and running conditions to "lay back" without losing time; and so the merry comedy has so far been all one sided. Oregon & Washington crews may they do not see Washington crews my they do not so much about the other two trains,
