VATICAN REPLIES TO METHODISTS

Mission in Rome Denounced as Bitterly Anti-Papal and Proselytizing.

FAIRBANKS GIVEN PRAISE

Papal Organ Gives Him Credit for Tolerance and Defends His Action in Speaking to Methodists on Plea of Ignorance.

ROME, Feb. 13.-The Weekly Review Rome, the organ of English-speaking Catholics, today publishes a long edi-torial on Charles W. Fairbanks, as Vice-President of the United States, which is believed to have been inspired by the Vatican. The editorial says:

"Mr. Fairbanks' Protestantism is broad and logical and allows him to put his stalwart shoulder to the wheel to help on every good cause. Though a strong party man in politics, bis devotion to party does not make him desire the disappearance of all parties but his own, and he has the same theory with regard to religion. He is a Methodist, but he has no wish that Methodism should be the only religion in America. "Mr. Fairbanks is a type of millions of good Americans, friendly to the Catholic church and believing that it makes little difference what a man's religion is, provided he does his best to live up to it." stalwart shoulder to the wheel to help to it."

After reviewing the incident between Mr. Fairbanks and the Vatican, the review emphasizes the tolerance of the Vatican and points out that a man may pass his whole life working in the Vatican archives and galleries without even being questioned as to whether he is a Turk or an atheist. He may even be a diplomatic representative to the Vatican without being a Catholic.

"But even the all-embracing liberality of the Vatican," continues the Review, "cannot include the Methodist organization here, which entered Rome through

"Mr. Fairbanks did not know these facts or he would not have given his promise to speak in the Methodist church 24 hours before the time fixed for his audience with the Pope. AUTO STRIKES LABORER

Albert Alquist Knocked Unconscious Near Bridge.

Albert Alquist, laborer, was struck by an automobile driven by E. D. Suiter, a demonstrator for the Western Automobile Company, near the south end of the Grand avenue bridge at 7:30 Saturday evening. He was rendered unconscious. He was hurried to St. Vincent's Hospital in a Red Cross auto-ambulance. His condition is not serious.

It is said the collision was unavoidable. At the moment of the accident Suiter was "coasting" across the bridge at a low rate of speed. In the car were seated his wife and two relatives. Alquist stepped from the curb and as he observed the approach of the car, halted his steps momentarily. When he endeavored to cross in the path of the vehicle he was hit.

EAST SWEPT BY STORM

Snow and High Winds Reported in Many States.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Heavy snow and high winds were reported today throughout New England, Eastern and throughout New England, Eastern and Southeastern states. In many places the storm amounted to a raging blizard. Considerable trouble has been experienced by rail and trolley lines and by telephone and telegraph service. The snowfall in New York was four inches and in Philadelphia the same. Two fishing vessels were blown ashore at Sandy Hook, and their crews were saved with difficulty. In Boston there was a heavy storm of snow and wind, one of the results being an unusually high tide. Several wrecks of sailing vessels are reported. Pittsburg surfered worst with 17 inches of snow, the storm lasting 15 hours.

From Atlanta it is reported that all attempts to get into communication

From Atlanta it is reported that all-attempts to get into communication with points on the Florida peninsula proved fruitless, owing to a severe wind storm. A small village north of Lakeland is reported wrecked. At Nashville, Tenn. the snowfall reached 10 inches and the storm is general throughout that state.

Many Lives Saved on Pacific Coast by Loss of the Kentucky.

Hartford Courant, It has been somewhat interesting and It has been somewhat interesting and duite suggestive to note the amount of hurrah there has been over the rescue of the people on the ramshackle Kentucky through the timely use of the wireless service. Once again this has proved its incalculable value to the interests of navigation. But so far neobody seems to have given a thought to the many more people who have saved their fives through the sinking of the Kentucky hefore she reached the Pacific coast instead of afterward. The vessel had changed her name so many times that the story of those titles casts discredit upon her. She leaked so badly on her first setting out that she had to make port for repairs. Speakers at Brilliant Banquet Unite in Praising Great American Statesman.

NEARLY 200 ARE PRESENT

Occasion Is Annual Dinner of Union Republican Club, but Prominent Democrats Are Also in Attendance.

Memory of Abraham Lincoln-the Memory of Abraham Lincoln—the man, the lawyer, the patriot—was honored at the annual dinner of the Union Republican Club at the Portland Commercial Club Saturday night. While Republicans predominated, the gathering was not a partisan affair, many leading Democrats being included among the guests. Nearly 200 prominent citizens from all parts of the state attended the banquet, which was not concluded until after midnight.

Letters or telegrams were read from a number of prominent men of the Nation, to whom invitations to the dinner had been sent, in which the recipients regretted their inability to attend. Among them were responses from President Taft, Postmaster-General Hitchcock, Representatives Ellis and Hawley and Judge George H. Williams. A builetin of President Taft's Lincoln day address, delivered at a banquet in New York City, was also read during the evening and was greeted with enthusisatic applause.

Ex-Senator Fulton Speaks.

Ex-Senator Fulton Speaks.

Principal among the after-dinner speakers was C. W. Fulton, ex-United States Senator, whose response to the toast, "The President of the United States Senator, whose response to the toast, "The President of the United States," was particularly eloquent and masterful. Mr. Fulton in introduction said that no other President of the United States was ever confronted by so many personal disadvantages as those with which Lincoln contended. Washington was fortified by long experience in public life for the office of Chief Executive and had as a further asset the absolute confidence and unswerving fidelity of all of the people. When Lincoln was first elected, however, he was without much experience in public life or affairs and was known to the public only as a Western lawyer. To many in the public mind he was overshadowed by Chase and Seward, men who were afterwards given places in his Cabinet. Mr. Fulton enumerated as some of the distinguished characteristics of Lincoln, his patient courage, confidence and disposition to trust in the final and deliberate judgment of the common people, an accurate knowledge of men, a sound and most unerring common sense. The martyred President was eulogized as not only "the greatest man this country has ever produced but the greatest man the world has known." His life and character, which had made his name sublime, said the speaker, would chilghten and enhoble posterity throughout the ages. The life of Lincoln, concluded Mr. Fulton in a brilliant peroration, was in itself the real and enduring monument to his memory and would "stand out on the shores of life as beacon lights to guide the American people onward and upward to a higher civilization." people onward and upward to a higher civilization."

C. Pier, president of the club under S. C. Pier, president of the club under whose auspices the hanquet was held, presided as toastmaster. In addition to Mr. Fulton, the other speakers were; A. C. Marsters, of Roseburg, who responded to the toast, "Lincoln, the Statesman"; T. J. Cleeton, of this city, "Lincoln, the Man"; Judge R. R. Butler, of Condon, "Lincoln, the Orator"; Judge C. H. Carey, of this city, "Lincoln, the Lawyer," and General Owen Summers. yer," and General Owen Summers, this city, "Lincoln, the Soldier's

Letter From Judge Williams.

Prevented from attending the ban-quet, Judge George H. Williams, the only surviving member of Fresident Grant's Cabinet, yesterday addressed a letter to W. H. Galvani, secretary of the Union Republican Club, which was read during the dinner. The letter follows:

I am not now in a condition to attend banquets, but if I were to make an exception it certainly would be for a banquet to commemorate the birth of Abraham Lincoln. "Some men are born great: some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them." Mr. Lincoln was one of those who was born great. In one of his letters he describes his early life as follows:

ters he describes his early life as follows:

"My father moved to Spencer County, Indiana, when I was eight years old. It was a wild region, with many bears and other wild animals in the woods. There I grew up. When I came of age I did not know much. Still, I could read, write and cipher to the rule of three, but that was all. I have not been to school since. The little I now have upon this store of education I have picked up from time to time under the pressure of necessity. I was raised to farm work, which I continued till I was 32."

Reared under these circumstances.

to farm work, which I continued till I was 12."

Reared under these circumstances, Mr. Idneoin must have had more than ordinary natural ability to reach the unparalleled eminence he attained in the political and literary world. He had as much inborn genius for statesmanship as Shakespeare had for poetry, Mozart for music or Michael Angelo for painting. Mr. Lincoln was not only born great, but he achieved greatness. His opportunities were great and his achievements correspondingly great. No man was ever confronted with greater difficulties than those Mr. Lincoln encountered when he became President of the United States. He entered upon the duties of that office with treason in front and treachery behind. With my personal knowledge of men and things as they were in our great Civil War, I have never been able to overcome my surprise at the success of the Union cause, and there is no greater evidence in all history of the interposition of Divine Providence to save a mation than is found in the result of the war to save the American It looks as though the nomination of Union.

It looks as though the nomination of Mr. Lincoln for President at the Chicago convention was the work of an unseen hand. The majority of that convention was favorable to another candidate, notwithstanding which Mr. Lincoln was nominated. His election under the circumstances was almost a miracle. And what is most wonderful of all was his adaptability to the necessities of the terrible ordeat through which he was destined to pass. If Mr. Lincoln's life was not so real it would be the romance of history with a tragic ending.

County Judge Duncan performed the better of history with a tragic ending.

We honor the memory of Lincoln, not because it does him any good, but because it is helpful to us. We grow wiser and better when we contemplate an exaited character. His example ought to be a living teacher of private and public virtues to all Americans. Our Democratic friends celebrate the birthdays of Jefferson and Jackson, which is entirely proper, but they do not celebrate the birthday of Abraham Lincoln. He was a Republican, and, if I may be allowed the expression, he was the Republican of Republicans. He was always opposed to the Democratic party. He was a Whig when the Whig party was in existence, and an ardent supporter of Henry Clay. If he was not the founder, he was the builder of the cause of National conservation is expected to be advanced. At a meeting of delegates of the allied clubs of Chicago at the Union League Club Friday, or fangements were made to form a Chicago cause it is being the cluster of the state.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Feb. 13.—

(Special.)—The Battle Creek Sanitarium, famous the world over, is lost to Battle Creek. Judge Parkinson this morning handed down a decision of unconditional ounter for non-payment of taxes.

Dr. Kellogg recently announced that in case the court decided against him the Republican party. His speeches in his debate with Douglas inspired the anti-slavery men of the country with new born zeal and drew them together into a strong and successful party organization. One blast upon his bugle horn was worth a thousand men.

Mr. Lincoln was not only a Republican, but he was a thorough going party man. I am not stating now what I have heard or what I believe, but what I know from my personal acquaintance with Mr. Lincoln, both as a private citizen of Illinols and as President of the United States. A man in Massachusetts wrote Mr. Lincoln asking him whether he was for or against a fusion of Republicans with other political parties in the canvass of 1899. His answer was: "As to the matter of fusion, I am for it if it can be had upon Republican grounds, and I am not for it upon any other terms. I am against lowering the Republican standard a hair's breadth.

Writing to a friend in Illinois before he was nominated for President, he said: "In it you will find a brief argument in favor of conventions and, although I wrote it myself, I will say to you that it is conclusive upon the point and cannot reasonably be answered. The right way for you to do is to hold your meetings and appoint delegates and if there be any who will not take part, let it be so the matter will work so well this time that even they who now oppose it will come in next time." The hue and cry now raised against party organization would have found cold comfort with Mr. Lincoln.

I have neticed that one or more Granges in this state have adopted resolutions that they will not vote for any candidate indorsed by a Republican entertain such views. To adopt them matter who or what he is, before they will vote for a candidate, no matter how good he may be, whose candidacy is approved by three or four hundred representative Republicans entertain such views. To adopt them generally would reduce our politics from an orderly system to a mere scramble between individuals for office in which the most likely to succeed. Let the Repub

Henry McKinney, representative from Baker county, delivered the address of welcome, which was responded to by by Colonel F. S. Ivanhoe, of La Grande. The most important speech of the evening was delivered by Governor Benson, who spoke upon the immortal Lincoln, in whose honor the gathering was held. C. A. Johns talked upon the primary law, favoring its principle, but not its workings. Jay Bowerman, president of the Senate, drew much applause in his address on representative government in Oregon, predicting the return of the Republican party to control. Senator Hart, of Baker City, talked upon "the end of it ali," indicating the end of Democratic power. J. L. That Postal Deficit

Postmaster-General Hitchcock reports that the Post-Office Department loses $64,000,000 a year in the business of carrying second-class mail (magazines and periodicals).

There is not a deficit of $17,000,000, as the department alleges, but actually a surplus of more than $10,000,000, when the specific loss on free rural delivery is taken into consideration, and the department's figures of $64,000,000 loss on second-class matter are wrong by more than $60,000,000.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

for February 12th devotes its editorial page to this subject, showing the injustice of the recommendation to raise the rate on all magazines and periodicals—but not on daily papers or the country weeklies.

One fact: In the year ended June 30th, 1908, the weight of second-class matter compared to 1907 decreased 18,-000,000 pounds. The postal expenditures increased $18,000,000. There is something in it besides second-class matter.
