BOY DRAWN INTO MUD

HELP COMES JUST AS HEAD IS DISAPPEARING.

Man Thinks Him Dead and Runs for Aid at Time When Every Moment is Precious.

After crying for help until exhausted, little Freddie Harkins yesterday was rescued from the mass of mud and water at South Mount Tabor, which had been sluiced from the new reservoir under construction at Mount Tabor, just as his head was disappearing.

The discharge had formed a considerable fill in the ravine south of the Section Line road, and across this a narrow board walk has been built.

Slowly the little boy was sucked into the mud until his head only was above, but no one came along.

The boy had been in the mud and water more than an hour, and would have disappeared beneath the surface in a few minutes.
