

DEADLOCK ON VETO STILL UNBROKEN

Asquith Rejects Compromise
Offered by Redmond to Solve Problem.

MORE PRESSURE NEEDED

Only Liberals and Laborites Can Force British Cabinet to Place
Budget in Second Place—New Election Seems Certain.

LONDON, March 27.—(Special)—The political sky suddenly became more favorable at the beginning of the week and for some hours the papers reported that a means of compromise had been found between the Liberals and the Irish.

The conciliatory speech of Asquith, inviting the Irishmen to a friendly negotiation, was followed by an interview between Redmond, Dillon and Lloyd-George.

The conclusion that everything was arranged was soon dissipated, however, by a communication from Redmond declaring that things remained as they were. The deadlock was still on, due to the insistence on the one hand by the Liberals that the budget must go through all the stages before any resolutions come down from the House of Lords, and the insistence of Redmond that the budget must be held up till the lords have pronounced on the veto.

Way to Break Deadlock Sought.

Redmond was even willing to vote for the budget during the early stages provided that the last stage be removed, but the Liberals fear this might mean the loss of the budget through the resignation of the ministry on the rejection by the lords of the veto resolutions. They declare they dare not face their English constituents without a budget.

Several parties are working to find a way out of this deadlock, but up to the present time no way of any way being found. The determination of Lloyd-George to get the budget, which his enormous reputation depends, backed by the equal determination of most of the members of the cabinet. However, the losses involved are so tremendous and a rupture means such gigantic disasters, that the hope of a final compromise cannot be abandoned, though the situation remains tense.

PREASURE May Move Cabinet.

The chief hope of a compromise lies in a general agreement among the Liberals and Laborites with Redmond's policy, and they still exercise a strong pressure on him to do it. But the cabinet, now, as at the beginning of the session, is not in close touch with the rank and file of the Liberal party and the members have been steadily hardening towards a rejection of Redmond's.

Redmond, in the meantime, is backed up by Irish opinion in extraordinary unanimity. I went with him to Liverpool last Sunday and never saw such a scene of enthusiasm. The great meeting was followed by an immense procession, where the cheering was continuous and where the largest subscription for 20 years was received. The Irish party today is certainly in a strong position than at any moment since the Parnell days. Possibly the excitement raised by the debate on the veto resolutions against the lords may excite a flame both in Ireland and England and may also give assurance of the reality of Asquith's campaign against the lords and enable both parties to approach the compromise in a more tolerant and reasonable spirit.

Lords Try to Ward Off Storm.

The resolutions for the moment have done the ministry good and, though criticized as to details, they are generally approved. The futile attempt of Lord Rosebery and the other progressive peers to get the House of Lords to make an advance towards the reformers themselves is helping the government in spite of the futility of these attempts.

One remarkable sign of the times is that the House of Lords accepted by an overwhelming majority the Rosebery resolution. Recalling that the hereditary title should no longer give the right to any peer to remain a member of the House of Lords.

Bailey will return from a holiday in the south of France at the beginning of April and the Unionist party will then develop a line of defense against the attack on the lords. There are four weeks which will be occupied by the debate of the veto in the House of Commons, thus bringing the Liberal and Irish into the same lobby night after night, to help toward a compromise. Anyhow, will give plenty of time to both sides for reflection.

Election Comes Nearer.

The most paradoxical point in the present parliamentary situation is that a general election seems inevitable and is coming nearer every hour, with all parties waiting and dreading the election. The proposal still suggested by Steel that the question of the lords be settled by a referendum at the expense of the state, so as to avoid the tumult and huge cost of an election, but this suggestion has received little favor.

Finally the attitude of the King remains unchanged and the two parties shrink from bringing him into the conflict, involving the safety of the dynasty and bringing perhaps to the Liberal party a great disfavor owing to the King's personal popularity. A desire to avoid a contest is also supposed to be one of the motives of the queen in not accepting Redmond's policy. Some people even suggest that several of the ministers are deliberately riding for a fall to escape this unpleasant encounter with the King.

Thomas W. Ballew Declares He Saw Race, Jockey Chewed Liver, Blood Ran and "Promoters" and "Bettors" Took to Cover.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 27.—(Special)—Thomas W. Ballew, millionaire lumberman and banker at Princeton, Mo., one of the numerous victims of the Maybray gang of swindlers, told yesterday he had no doubt there was truth in some of Mr. Patton's charges. "But the peculiar part of the affair," said Mr. Laughton, "is that Mr. Patton and I, who know drunkards as his witnesses. He had no evidence and it was to be obtained, why did he not have men whom we know and can believe to give testimony for him? As to his charge of gambling, we have seen card playing behind the cigar store many times, but on no single occasion have I seen a cent of money on the table that could be believed otherwise than that the gamblers were friendly."

Mr. Patton asserts he has seen gambling going on in the city and that he obtained his information when he went through the so-called dens, disguised as a logger.

No allusion to the situation was made in the Methodist Church today and Rev. Mr. Patton will take no further steps until required to do so.

HOLDUP MEN CONFESS

SALT LAKE MURDER CLEARED ON EASTER SUNDAY.

Baltimore Boy, After Night in Jail, Tells All—Says He "Didn't Mean to Shoot."

SALT LAKE CITY, March 27.—Harry Thorn today confessed to the murder of George F. Fassell, an East Side grocer, during the perpetration of a holdup last night.

Thorn, who is from Baltimore, and asserts he is but 18 years of age, names John Hays and a man called "Curly" as his associates in the robbery. Hays also has admitted his complicity.

He thought he was getting ready to hold his hands higher. I stuck my gun into his side to scare him and it went off. I did not mean to shoot."

Thorn and Hays were arrested within minutes after the robbery. "Curly" is at large. On their arrival in the police station, they had come under the observation of George Sheets, chief of detectives. Sheets took the precaution to find out where they were rooming. The description of the robbers, obtained after the robbery, while meager enough, was sufficient to connect them in the mind of the detective, with the men he had suspected.

A detail of police walked from the police station to a rooming house half a block away and burst into the room noted in Sheets' memorandum book.

They found two men breathless from fast walking, a warm revolver, money corresponding to the sum taken from Fassell's store and lost from a recent burglary.

Thorn passed a restless night in the City Jail and told of his crime with little persuasion when questioned today.

SQUATTER WILL NOT GO

Owner of Wahana Site Finds Strange Man in Possession.

SEASIDE, Or., March 27.—(Special)—When a squatter squats in a nice little cabin on one of your choicest lots and refuses to move, just what is the next action to take?

Mr. Wright of Portland, has the problem to answer. Mr. Wright is the owner of a choice building site on the Wahana River, a tributary of the Necanicum. A few days ago he visited Seaside to make arrangements for a summer cottage and was thus forced to make a hasty trip back to his home in Oregon. He told his wife he would hold his hands higher. I stuck my gun into his side to scare him and it went off. I did not mean to shoot."

Both the robbers were arrested within minutes after the robbery. "Curly" is at large. On their arrival in the police station, they had come under the observation of George Sheets, chief of detectives. Sheets took the precaution to find out where they were rooming. The description of the robbers, obtained after the robbery, while meager enough, was sufficient to connect them in the mind of the detective, with the men he had suspected.

A detail of police walked from the police station to a rooming house half a block away and burst into the room noted in Sheets' memorandum book.

F. Brooks.

Death was sudden and is described as Bright's disease and mental worry brought on by the divorce proceedings. Mrs. Stubbs Sunderland was born in San Francisco, May 18, 1881.

She was married to Sunderland, who came of one of the most prominent Reno families, in Chicago, on February 18, 1902. They had maintained one of the most luxurious homes in Reno until a year ago.

Woman Long Invalid.

Ill health actually forced her retirement and she had been an invalid for several years past.

Several days ago Mrs. Sunderland left for the Coast to visit school-day friends and relatives and at that time seemed well and in good spirits, despite the recent trying ordeal in the divorce courts.

The divorce was granted on the grounds of cruelty.

J. C. Stubbs, who has been making an inspection of the Harriman lines in company with Judge Lovett, was noted as dead in Phoenix, Ariz., and has hastened to San Francisco, where he will leave San Francisco with a train in a special train on Monday afternoon.

FAMILY HURRIES WEST.

POLITICAL UNREST

Political unrest had some reflection in the securities markets through apprehension of a reopening of the tariff question.

Railroads last week still withheld orders for longer rails and other equipment, but official confirmation was received of previous contracts for cars and locomotives which insures for March the highest record since last November. Bids have been submitted on rail bridge requiring 9,000 tons of fabricate steel, but no awards have been made, and other railroad work is pending calling for 13,000 tons of structural material.

With an absence of railroad work there has been keener competition for labor and contractors and manufacturers from contractors and manufacturers for new buildings. The result has been the receipt of specifications for about 25,000 tons taken on a basis of 1.40 to 1.50 per ton.

There has been 4,000 tons to the New Jersey Zinc Company, divided between the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. and the Lackawanna Bridge Company.

A large amount of new structural work is pending and never were the fabricating shops so busy in their estimating departments as now. Work present and prospective, will call for about 150,000 tons of structural steel.
