Testimony in Refutation of Glavis' Charges That "Frame-Up" Was Made Is Given in Ballinger-Pinchot Investigation.

WASHINGTON, April 8 .- Testimony designed to refute the assertion of ex-special Agent Glavis that the finding of missing spapers among his effects was a "frame-up" was introduced in the Bailinger-Pinchot hearing today. The committee ordered Secretary Bailinger committee ordered Secretary Ballinger to submit certain documents with "all due speed," and late in the afteracon listened to the testimony of a witness who said that Alaska was retrogressing because of neglect to develop the coat measures of the territory.

This witness said that people were beginning to leave the country. They would not stay, and could not hope for permanent improvement, he declared, so long as there were no railroads, and they could not hope for railroads when the coal measures were all locked up. Glavis Takes Papers.

Beginning with the subject of the eflavis letters, the committee listened to the reading of many documents presented in connection with the testimony of Andrew Christensen, Glavis' successor in the field service. Christensen said that he had trouble about the turning over of a good many of Glavis' papers when he had taken office. He said that Glavis took a bundle of papers away with him and declined to let the witness see them until he had made witness see them until he had made see them until he had made

On the advice of the United States District Attorney he made a demand in writing upon Glavis, who replied the following day by returning part of the missing documents. There were 24 still

Then Christfensen took up the ques-tion with the department. Copies of the correspondence with the department were read. Vertrees apologized for taking up the time of the committee with these details, but said that they were necessary, in view of the charge made by Glavis that the finding of the papers had been a "frame-up."

Criminal Action Contemplated.

In one of his letters to the department, Christensen said that Glavis was utterly untruthful; that it was useless to have a conversation with him unless in the presence of a stenographer.

At one time it was contemplated that criminal proceedings might be taken against Glavis. With this in view, a list of possible witnesses had been prepared. The list included editors and publishers of periodicals in which copies of the missing letters had appeared in print.

Christensen said that he had become convinced that Ghavis had furnished copies of the letters to the Forestry Service, which had furnished them to the papers. Glavis had admitted sending them to the Forestry Bureau, but Accounting Sought. had denied being involved in their pub this, saying it was not only offensive to the witness but to the committee as well. Attorney Vertrees said be desired to protest generally against Mr. Brandels' methods in deading with witnesses. Mr. Christensen thereupon was excused and Alfred H. Brooks, a mineral expert of the geological survey, was called to the stand to testify as to coal conditions in Alaska.

Much of Coal Low Grade.

Mr. Brooks said that the total area of Alaska is 188,000 square miles. Of coalbearing rocks there are known to be about 12,000 square miles. Only about one-tenth of the coal area is known to be underlaid with coal seams.

About one-half of the entire coal area is made up of lignitio, or a very low grade of coal. About one-fifth of the territory has not yet been surveyed, and the witness said that there was every reason to believe that in the northern part of the territory are some of the most extensive coal deposits. These are not included in the 12,000 miles' estimate.

Mr. Brooks declared that if the Alaska fields were opened it would mean a saving to the United States Navy of at least $20,000 a year. The expert also said that Railroads Need Fuel.

"Ten't glaciers make up most of the forest reserves," asked Senator Nelson, amid laughter. "Yes," replied the witness. "Alaska is retrogressing," said Mr. Brooks, "People are becoming discouraged and are leaving. This is largely due to the coal situation. Without coal there can be no railroads, and without railroads there can be no business to speak of."

In to this time the witness declared.

Up to this time, the witness declared, the visible coal supply in the United States has been consumed only to the amount of four-tenths of I per cent, leaving 16 6-19 yet to be mined.

Mr. Brooks was still on the stand when the committee adjourned until temorrow.
