SALE DOOMS SHACK

Site of Old Wells Fargo Office to Be Improved.

GOODE ESTATE SELLS IT

Secretary Steele Relocating to Home on Fourth and Yamhill Corner.

Local Characters to Participate.

A two-story shack in the heart of the business district, the old Wells Fargo Office, will be torn down for the purpose of remodeling and erecting a first-class business block in its place.

The property was purchased by the local character of the name of Goode, whose real name is Jones, and his associates. Jones is a well-known and respected business man, and the property is expected to bring a handsome return on its investment.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The first newspaper to be published in Portland was the Oregonian, which was founded in 1850. It was a weekly publication and was published by Henry Ladd.

The Oregonian was a forerunner of the Portland Oregonian, which is still in operation today.
