HEADQUARTERS OF FESTIVAL LIVELY

Busy Hum at Offices Foretells Success of Big Rose Show.

FLOATS BEING DESIGNED

Railroads Waging Extensive Publicity Campaign in All Sections of Country—East Side Is Making Preparations.

Plans for Portland's fourth annual Rose Festival are maturing rapidly. At the Festival Association headquarters in the Sweetland building, typewriters are banging, telephones ringing and the constant sound of voices in conference is heard throughout the day, and at times far into the night.

Densets of designs for floats to be seen in the various parades are being made. It is desired to finish all this work as soon as possible so there will be no hitch in the programme on the opening day.

The first call for tourists and pleasure-seekers to visit Portland during its annual spectacular display of floral beauty was sounded about two weeks ago, when contracts involving several thousand dollars were signed by the Northern Pacific for space in some of the leading Eastern magazines and periodicals. At that time it was announced the matter was in preparation for a still more extensive publicity campaign. Just how comprehensive it is to be explained in a letter from Assistant General Passenger Agent A. D. Charlton to the Rose Festival Association, received yesterday.

Howard Elliott a Booster.
President Howard Elliott, of the Northern Pacific, has seen two former Rose Festivals and he says he will make every effort to attend the one next month. So enthusiastic has President Elliott been over the fine pageantry and other features of the celebration that he has made it a point to boost for it upon many occasions both in interviews and public addresses in the East.

Committees from the East Side Business Men's Club will today start soliciting funds to finance the children's parade and decorations for the Rose Festival. Men have been assigned to different districts.

Nolta to Open Office.
J. H. Nolta, who is chairman and general manager of the Peninsula Rose Association, will open an office within a few days, on Killingsworth avenue, and devote his entire time to preparing for the Festival. There will be many details to work out in connection with the rose train from the Peninsula, the depot booth and election of queen and maids of honor from now on till the Festival.

Thursday night, the Jewell Theater, on Killingsworth avenue, will give all the proceeds of the evening to the

HAWAIIANS HONOR DEAD

Member of Orchestra Passes; Countrymen Chant Meles.

Chanting the old tribal meles, six Hawaiians performed unique ceremonies over the body of Thomas Killiwa, a native of the mid-Pacific islands, who died last week. Killiwa was a member of the Royal Hawaiian orchestra, which is engaged at the Oregon Grill, and he had been in this state for the past two years.

"Meles" are songs in the kanaka dialect which relate the history of the deceased and his family back as far as his ancestry can be traced, and they are only sung on the occasion of a luau (feast) or a death. It is an ancient custom in Hawaii in which the old-time natives take great pride.

PROMINENT MASON IS DEAD.

William Schabbehar, a citizen well known in German-American circles, died at his home, 869 Colonial avenue, on April 24, after prolonged suffering from cancer.

Mr. Schabbehar was a loyal member of the Masons, retaining his membership in Prazee lodge, of Frazer, Minn., where he formerly resided. He was born in Germany and came to America when a young man. He had been a resident of Portland about three years. Mr. Schabbehar was for about two years the proprietor of the North Park Hotel. He is survived by a widow and his loss is mourned by a host of friends and relatives. He was 64 years and four months old at the time of his death.

Killiwa was buried from the Catholic church at Fourth and Mill streets, the solemn rites of that church also being celebrated over his body. The pallbearers were all Hawaiians, members of the singing organization. Their names are Jack P. Heihubi, David Nape, Solomon Hiram, James Shaw, Ben Jones, and James Kulaha. Among other songs which were rendered by the sweet-voiced singers of the South Sea Islands was "Aloha Oe," which, translated, means, "My love goes with thee." Killiwa was married in Oregon, his wife being an American girl. He had no children.

CITIZENS FIGHT GRAND JURY DUTY

Judge, However, Decides That Many Excuses Are Insufficient to Hold.

BUSY SELLING LAND IS ONE

Hotel Man, Finding Judge Morrow "Better Talker" Than Self, Gives Way and Decides He'll Serve. Grand Jury in Session.

Although 115 names were drawn to make up the May jury in the Circuit Court, only 27 were left to do duty yesterday after President Judge Morrow had heard the excuses. Some of these had asked to be excused, but had been refused by the judge because their reasons were considered insufficient.

One of them wished to be relieved of jury duty because he could neither read nor write. The judge told him he probably would not be called upon to do either, and that if he did others could do it for him.

The judge was somewhat amused when, in the midst of excuses on account of sickness and other serious matters, H. C. Wall, a hotel keeper, said he hadn't time to serve on the jury.

"We haven't time to let you go, Mr. Wall," was Judge Morrow's response. "Well, I am getting too old, anyway; I'm 51," he replied. "I am older than that," was the judge's rejoinder. "But I am losing money by it," persisted Wall. "I have some real estate to sell."

General John H. Soper, of Honolulu, Who May Invest in Oregon Land, Arrives in Portland.

Passing through numerous revolutions unscathed, General Soper is a unique figure in the history of the little group of islands known as the "Paradise of the Pacific." He was marshal of the monarchy under King David Kalakaua, the last reigning potentate, later becoming chief-of-staff under President Dole, of the Provisional Government.

Born in 1846, General Soper is today as hale and hearty as he was 20 years ago.
