clamation work of any magnitude whatever in this valley. Through his individual enterprise a ditch was dug from Lower Klamath Lake and water delivered to 6000 acres of land. This was more than a decade ago. Then he found himself with a large area of land in his possession, a ditch and no money. Settlers were induced to take the land on contract without paying a dollar down and were guaranteed free water for three years. Mr. Adams expected to derive a yearly income from the water delivered after the expiration of the three years. Later the Government stepped in and signed up the land owners to the Government reclamation project. Mr. Adams had but few contracts and accepted the alternative of selling out to the Reclamation Service. Previously he had endeavored to organize a stock company among the settlers and sell the ditch for $100,000, which with improvements planned would have resulted in a cost of $10 per acre for the land reclaimed. The effort failed and he sold out to the Government for $100,000. Now the holders of the original Adams tract are paying the Government $30 per acre for the water that they could have purchased for $10 per acre for it was lumped in with the new work undertaken by the Government to illustrate Mr. Adams' enterprise and public spirit. Like Mr. Hanley, he purposes to fight the indictment against him.

Farm "Unfit for Agriculture."

Equally interesting is the experience of E. St. George Bishop, ex-Mayor of Klamath Falls and one of the substantial men of the county. Three and one-half years ago Mr. Bishop made application for the exclusion from the forest reserve of 160 acres of land bordering on Klamath Lake near Odessa postoffice. This application was made under the act of Congress which permits homesteading of agricultural land within the limits of National Forests. An inspector who examined the land reported that it was not fit for agriculture, and the application was denied along with the applications of others covering a fringe of lake where about four miles long. All but Mr. Bishop accepted the ruling, but the latter was once a Sheriff in Texas and the old fighting spirit was roused. Affidavits from some 50 prominent residents of Klamath County who inspected the land were secured, all to the effect that in excess of 100 acres of the tract were fit only for agriculture. Mr. Adams, previously mentioned, was one of this number. The land is described as being largely a natural meadow with some marsh land capable of being diked. The history of the controversy, which involved both the Reclamation Service and the Forest Service in the three years, is a long one. Briefly told, Mr. Bishop's appeal is still pending, the land has been excluded from the forest reserve, but is now reserved for "reclamation purposes." He asserts that he has a letter from ex-Supervisor Allen of the Forestry Service assuring him that if the land was excluded, Mr. Bishop's claim would be recognized, and that he also has a recommendation for the approval of the Chief Engineer Patch of the Klamath Project. Yet in spite of every effort, favorable action cannot be obtained at Washington.

Land Reserved for "Recreation."

In the meantime the fiery Southerner has held on to the land he has erected on the property the second best home in Klamath County. His story, as he relates it, is one of constant harassment by forestry men, for although the land has been withdrawn by the Reclamation Service, the Forestry Bureau is attempting to administer it. On two occasions a notice of rocky point a notice has been posted that the land is withheld by the Government for "recreation purposes." What that means, Mr. Bishop says, he does not know.

When the entire quarter section was withdrawn for reclamation purposes it was on the theory that the lake might some day be raised four feet in reclaiming land in the lower valley, and that, if patent issued, Mr. Bishop would have recourse for damages against the Government. Mr. Bishop promptly signed a waiver of his riparian rights. Then the claim was made that the land was needed for logging purposes, and he offered a right-of-way through the tract for a logging road.

Some time ago logging operations were started on an adjoining tract of timber and the Government rangers went through the tract cutting the trees that were ripe for cutting. It is related that they ignored one tract of mature timber and went over on the land claimed by Mr. Bishop and spotted the trees that are reserved for ornament around his new residence. The trees were preserved through the threats of Mr. Bishop that he would shoot the first man who started to cut one of them down.

Rangers Violate Liquor Law.

The land is now held by Mr. Bishop under a lease pending settlement of his long-pending appeal, the rental of which he is paying under protest. He asserts that, while he was getting some of the land ready for use the forest rangers demanded that he pay the Government $25 a month for the down and dead timber. A new tract was given to the fight with the rangers recently by Mr. Bishop when he filed affidavits at Washington charging that liquors were being sold unlawfully at a resort leased in the forest by the Government, and that some of the rangers were getting free whiskey for overlooking the violation of the law.

For two miles on either side of Mr. Bishop's tract on land similar to his, he asserts, notices have been posted that the land is withheld for "administrative purposes." Men who profess to know say that the National forests of Oregon are full of such notices posted on agricultural land.

Settlers Driven Away.

Still another incident has come to light from Swan Lake Valley, which at one time was withdrawn as possible of reclamation under the Klamath project. The irrigation of the valley by that means was found impracticable, however, and the valley was excluded from the project about three years ago. Yet within the last few days one man who attempted to file on a homestead in the valley has received notice from Washington that the land is reserved for reclamation purposes.

Mr. Hill is also advocating a good roads movement. The tour through the country has shown the party that there are main trunk lines connecting the principal points in Crook, Harney, Lake and Klamath Counties, which could be made good highways at small expense. Mr. Hill believes that the exploitation work to be undertaken in Oregon will bring in many intending investors who will desire to inspect the large areas of country, either by team or automobile. He suggests co-operation by the four counties named in the improvement of the connecting roads, and that at each county seat the officials keep in touch with the road conditions so that men touring the country can ascertain by telephone whether certain points may be reached. Mr. Hanley has pledged Harney County's aid in the movement.

FAIR IS TO SHOW COTTON

Plans for Clackamas County Exhibit Go on Apace.

OREGON CITY, Or., May 20.—(Special.)—The Clackamas County Fair Association, at a business meeting in the Courthouse this afternoon, decided to give S. Lindsey the use of the track at the fairgrounds for a race meet Saturday, June 4. The Canby brand will furnish the music during the races. Arrangements for the opening of the fair in September are also being made. The superintendents of the different departments have been appointed, as follows: Livestock, George M. Lazelle, of Mount Pleasant; dairy, M. S. Shrock, of Aurora; juvenile, Miss Amelia Spulak, of New Era; horticulture, A. J. Lewis; poultry, Fred G. Dougherty, of Molalla; ladies' textile, Mrs. J. L. Waldron. The schools of the county will have exhibits, and a superintendent will be selected for this department.

There are to be many new attractions at the coming fair. On the opening day a barbecue and potato show will be among the chief attractions. A Portland firm will give a $50 potato planter to the exhibitor of the best potatoes. A baby show will be given on the last day of the fair. Last year there were over 40 babies exhibited.

O. E. Freytag, vice-president of the association, and M. J. Lee, secretary, superintended a crew of men on the grounds yesterday. A field of cotton was planted as well as sugar cane, sorghum and Siberian millet. These crops have never before been raised in this state. Mr. Freytag, who is an experienced cotton-grower, says the soil in Canby is well adapted for raising cotton. It is the intention of the fair committee to have a spinning wheel in the exhibit building, where the cotton will be spun.

Portland Wrestler Throws Busch.

BAKER CITY, Or., May 20.—Joe Heinrich, formerly of Portland, threw Carl Busch, champion middleweight wrestler of Germany and America, two successive falls here tonight. Busch was rough, but not equal for the clever local lad. The first fall came in 30 minutes with a hammerlock and crotch hold. The second fall followed in one minute and 35 seconds. Heinrich is seeking a match with O'Connell of Portland.
