

SHIP'S COOK LIES BY OTHER VICTIMS

Frank Tiffany, Who Died After Loss of Marhoffer, Is Buried at Newport.

Captain and Chief Engineer Will Start Today for San Francisco to Make Report of Disaster to Ship's Owners.

NEWPORT, Or., May 20.—(Special).—With the forecastle intact and portions of the bow and stern still visible, the steam schooner J. Marhoffer lies close to shore 20 miles north of here, a total loss as a result of the fire which started in the engine room late Wednesday afternoon.

Frank Tiffany, the vessel's cook, who died of fright and exposure, was buried here today after a coroner's jury had investigated the manner of his death. Tiffany was buried beside the bodies of the victims of the wreck of the Minnie Kelton, lost near here two years ago.

Gustave Peterson, captain of the ill-fated steamer, and George Hastorf, chief engineer, will leave Saturday for San Francisco, in response to a message from the owners of the Marhoffer, to whom they will make a report of the disaster. Mrs. Peterson will accompany her husband. Other members of the crew will go to Portland to ship out on other coast vessels.

Gasoline Torch Starts Fire.

According to best information available, the fire started from an explosion of a gasoline torch in the engine-room. The vessel, sailing from San Francisco to Portland to load lumber, was proceeding leisurely toward coast and near shore. James Kent, assistant engineer, and ex-president of the Marine Engineers' Association, were working in the hold with a gasoline torch. The torch exploded, and in an instant the interior of the room was filled with flames.

In a futile effort to put out the fire Kent was badly burned on the arms and hands.

The flames spread so rapidly that it was impossible for Kent or Chief Engineer George Hastorf, who had been summoned by an alarm, to shut off the engines, which were going full speed ahead.

The captain was in his stateroom with his wife when notified by the alarm. He gave orders to work the pumps, but this was impossible, as the valves were in the flames. Shortly afterward he gave orders to abandon the ship and to use the lifeboats.

Captain Slightly Scorched.

A wave filled the first boat lowered half full, but the cook and two sailors got into it. The heat of the flames was terrific and Captain Peterson's face was scorched slightly while launching the second lifeboat.

The captain's wife was let down from the stern of the ship by a rope tied around her waist. The others of the crew slid down ropes. The captain's dog, a bull terrier, was tossed into the sea by the mate and was picked up and saved by the crew.

The helm had been tied hard over to make the ship go ashore, and although the rope soon burned, the boat made its way to the rocky shore, fully five miles from the coast.

The lifeboat containing the water was soon baled and the survivors were equally distributed in it. The cook keeled over and was brought into the captain's boat, but lay limp, with heavy seas.

Land Reached After Five Miles.

The survivors then rowed five miles to a cove, where they landed on a sandy beach. There they built a fire. The captain and his wife, chief engineer and three sailors climbed a steep bank, striking out through heavy brush for a quarter of a mile, came to the coast or county road.

After walking two miles through the woods in deep mud and darkness, they came to an abandoned shack, where the captain decided to remain overnight with his wife. The chief engineer and three sailors continued on their way until they reached the United States light house at Yaquina Head 18 miles south of the wreck. Here they were fed and some clothes were loaned them by Keeper Wilson. They left at 4 in the morning, reaching Newport two hours later, when the Coroner was notified and assistance secured.

Food Supplies Sent.

Captain Jacobson of the Newport bought the men breakfast. Commissioner John Fogarty sent abundant food supplies to the men remaining up the coast.

Captain Wellander, U. S. L. S. S. Chief Engineer Hastorf and Chief Peterson immediately set off for the wreck in various wagons. After traveling two miles a wagon containing Captain and Mrs. Peterson, the first mate and a driver was met. Captain Peterson joined the chief engineer and Captain Wellander and returned to examine the wreck. A few sailors were also met walking to Newport.

Those who had remained on the beach were discovered by some home-steaders, C. W. Lovgren, Mr. Cohen and Mrs. and Miss Greenwood, who gave the hungry men food, after traveling six miles to get it and carry it to them.

Attempt to Board Wreck Fails.

The second mate, assistant engineer, firemen and sailors were found near the lifeboats. The corpse of Tiffany lay wrapped in a blanket and was carried from the beach to the county road, where Coroner F. M. Carter held an inquest, which resulted in a verdict of "death due to exposure and fright." The body was then wrapped up and was brought in town in a rough box on a wagon today.

When the wreck was reached just a little of the stern, the bow, with the forecastle intact, and some debris remained. Captain Peterson, Chief Engineer Hastorf and Captain Wellander inspected it, but were unable to board what remained of her. Frank Tiffany, the dead cook, was a widower, and has two children living in Los Angeles.

BONANZA MAY NOT REBUILD

Destroyive Fire and Government's Action Hurt—Mystery in Blaze.

BONANZA, Or., May 20.—(Special).—Although the citizens of this town and the county officials have been working unceasingly to fathom the cause of the fire which made a wreck of the business portion of Bonanza on the night of May 14, no tangible clew has yet been secured.

Every day the belief increases that the town was burned by an incendiary. On the night of the fire and after the Driscoll store was almost all in flames some one aroused the town by calling with loud "hailoos," and the belief is that could this party be located the guilty one would be unearthened.

Just what will be done in the way of rebuilding the town is not yet known. Those who lost their entire property except the ground on which the buildings stood have hardly recovered from the shock to be able to state as to their future intentions. Bonanza has been at almost a standstill for the past year because of the action of the Reclamation Service in stopping work on the Upper Klamath irrigation project, and it is thought the future acts of the Government will govern the people who were burned out as to what they will do toward rebuilding.

The calling off of the work by the Government on the Horsesly and Clear Lake parts of the Klamath project was a serious blow in itself to the people of the entire upper country, and especially did it cripple this town. Now, on top of this action by the Government in declaring not to put water on the lands of the valleys adjacent to the town comes the fire, and the two together means almost death knell upon Bonanza for a long time to come unless

100 FALL; NONE INJURED

SCOTS' PICNIC MARRED WHEN SEAT SECTION COLLAPSES.

Eleventh Annual Caledonian Celebration Held at Athena—Portland Man Speaks.

ATHENA, Or., May 20.—(Special).—Miraculous was the escape from death and serious injury today of five score persons when a section of seats collapsed at the 11th annual Caledonian picnic in this city today. The accident occurred as Professor W. v. Lyman, of Whitman, was delivering his address at the morning celebration. Fully 100 were thrown to the ground, several suffering only bruises and scratches.

The doctor paused until the confusion was over and then, when informed that no one was hurt, he said: "I feel sure the comet did it."

The doctor, in his address, paid high tribute to the people of the Northwest. The city was in the hands of the Scotch today and the city park was thronged with visitors from all parts of the county. There were three programmes during the day, one in the morning, afternoon and evening, at all of which Judge Cameron, of Portland, was a prominent figure.

The forenoon programme consisted of music and dancing, after which Athena and Weston met on the diamond and Athena won, the score being 7 to 2.

A feature of the event is the attendance of two Scotch nonagenarians, Peter & Morrison, of Big Horn, Wyo., who is 97 years old, and Robert Semple, aged 91, resident of Pendleton.

All preparations are made to entertain a much larger crowd tomorrow.

GIRLS EDIT PAPER

Oregon University Co-eds to Show Men Few Tricks.

EMERALD IS OUT TODAY

Feminine Invasion of College Journalistic Field Anxiously Awaited by Eugene Folk—Edition Will Be of 14 Pages Saturday.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, May 20.—(Special).—After trying their hands at tennis, debating, oratory and other activities that used to be considered exclusively fields for masculine intellect and endeavor, and doing well in them, too, girls of the University of Oregon have gone a step further and decided to enter journalism. They will demonstrate tomorrow by issuing the Woman's Edition of the Oregon Emerald, the official student publication. W. C. Nicholas, of Portland, the regular editor, has given way to the young women.

CO-EDS WHO WILL EDIT UNIVERSITY JOURNAL.

Miss Helen Higbee, 12, formerly of the University of Washington, is one of the moving spirits in this feminine invasion of college newspaperdom. Miss Higbee used to be a star reporter on the Washington daily, and has decided ideas about "scops," "makeup," front page "stories," "yellow" journalism, sporting extras, and all that. As city editor and sporting editor of the Woman's Edition, she has outlined a programme that has set every co-ed heart and those of some of the masculines who hope to be "written up" aglow with enthusiasm.

Reading Won't Be Dull.

The paper won't be a bit dull to read. One of the big features will be the sporting section, which will be under the direct supervision of Miss Higbee herself, and right up-to-date. Co-ed reporters will write knowingly all about the baseball prospects and the track meets, as such things should be written up, and indications are they will display a knowledge of baseball slang that may be surprising.

Then, of course, Ferd Henkle, the star pitcher, Trainer "Bill" Hayward, and other good-looking athletes will receive special "writeups."

In addition to the sporting department, and the regular news events of the day, written in the most entertaining style, the paper will contain a special co-ed department. There will be pictures of girls who have distinguished themselves in various lines of activity, and stories about them. All the girls societies and activities will receive special attention. There will be plenty of news to write about for the paper issued on the last day of Junior week-end, the festive event of the season in college society circles, when various entertainments are given for the benefit of the fund for the State and the University. The girls even have a cartoonist, and a feature will be a special cartoon on the Oregon-O. A. C. track meet.

Paper to Have 14 Pages.

Altogether the paper will have 14 pages bristling with interesting things, and at least 14 cuts and pictures. It will be issued in yellow covers, and sold to the students at the ball game Saturday afternoon by a staff of newswriters, under the direction of Miss Caroline Dunston, the enterprising business manager.

Miss Pauline Davis, 10, of Eugene, is editor-in-chief, and will write the editorials; Miss Emma Waterman, 12, assistant business manager; Miss Helen Higbee, 12, city editor; and Misses Olive Donnell, 11, Jessie Elbes, 12, Helen Beach, 11, Marion Stowe, 11, and Ruby Hammerstrom, 11, reporters.

SALEM, Or., May 20.—(Special).—In supplemental articles of incorporation filed today in the office of the Secretary of State, the Oregon Trunk Railway Company declares its intention to build up about them. There will be plenty of news to write about for the paper issued on the last day of Junior week-end, the festive event of the season in college society circles, when various entertainments are given for the benefit of the fund for the State and the University. The girls even have a cartoonist, and a feature will be a special cartoon on the Oregon-O. A. C. track meet.

BEND MOST JOYFUL

News of Coming of Railroad Causes Enthusiasm.

SETTLERS' RUSH COMING

Vast Agricultural Districts Will Be Opened up and Outlet Will Be Furnished for Billions of Feet of Fine Timber.

BEND, Or., May 20.—(Special).—Announcement that this is to be the junction point of the trans-state road with the Oregon Trunk line has been received in Bend with the greatest enthusiasm.

For some eight months survey crews and engineers have been in the field to the southeast, and it has been suspected that final location had been made on the line from Bend to a point in the far southeast portion of the state. The announcement made by John E. Burdard, on behalf of the syndicate which has purchased the wagon road land grant that extends practically across Oregon, now makes the matter sure.

Ontario to Bend is given as the route of the Boise & Western, which will be extended westerly to meet the main Hill Deschutes line at this point. Not only will the completion of this road open up to colonization the vast holdings of the newly-purchased road grant lands, but it will accelerate as nothing else could the settlement of the enormous areas of homestead land southeast of Bend.

The Ontario-Bend road, however, will pass through the heart of this embryo wheat country. There is room in it, say experts who have thoroughly investigated its possibilities, for thousands of families. This last railroad news will insure an unprecedented rush of land-seekers, who, in the next year, will more than double the farming population of Central Oregon.

Perhaps the most vital effect of this east-and-west road upon Bend's development is the outlet it will provide for Deschutes Valley timber products. Lumbermen say that practically every foot of the lumber manufactured at Bend will be shipped directly to the markets of the Middle Southwest. Ogen is predicted as the great market and distributing point.

In the timber belt of the Deschutes are at least 50,000,000,000 feet of live yellow pine, some 30,000,000,000 of which, it is said, can advantageously be milled at Bend.
