winning both games of the bargain heliday matinee by score of 1 to 0 and 3 to 0 respectively. The first game was a pitchers' bat-tle between Seaton and Fitzgerald, and the Portlander just nosed the "Sacto" heaver out because his teammates succeeded in pulling one run out of the fire, while the Senators could not get within halling distance of the place where runs count.

The other game was a slaughter, in which both Jimmy Whalen and Nourse, for Sacramento, were treated quite roughly by the swatsmen who call on Walt McCredie the first and 15th of each month. Gene Krapp, the sterling little twirler of the McCredie squad, officiated in the second kalsomining exhibition and he was comally as effective. hibition and he was equally as effec-tive as was Seaton in the first game, while his teammates piled up runs and hits enough to win several games.

Rapps Makes First Tally.

The only score in the opening of the bargain day event was tolled off on the gong in the second inning. Bill Rapps was the first Beaver up and he Rapps was the first Beaver up and he smashed one against Fitzgerald's shins and was safe at first. Casey bunted and Fitzgerald erred trying to field it. both runners being safe. Speas sacrificed, advancing both runners, and Buddy Ryan's long sacrifice fly to Briggs scored Rapps for the only run of the game. Fitzgerald settled down after that and pitched gilt edged ball, Speas being the only Portlander to reach third after that inning, but he was left.

Nourse Walks First Man.

Nourse was delegated to try his hand against Portland in the second game, ing to sacrifice. Gus Fisher pickled one for three bases, scoring both Olson and Smith, and trotted home a moment later when Bill Rapps skied a long sacrifice to "Deacon" Van Buren.

sacrifice to "Deacon" Vain Buren.

Captain Casey laced one for two sacks, and this was the signal for Graham to tie a can to Nourse, who was supplanted by Jimmy Whalen. The handsome one got rid of Billy Speas quite handily, ending the first inning, but he got his in the second canto. Buddy Ryan fouled to Danzig, but Krapp banged one safely into left field. Jimmy Smith hit safely to right, and Olson walked, filling the bases. Hetling hit to Shinn and Krapp was forced at the plate. Raymer juggled Gus Fisher's grounder momentarily and Smith and Olson, the latter dashing all the way from seconds. Smith and Olson, the latter dashing all the way from second, scored. Rapps then hit into the crowd in left field for two bases, scoring Heiling. Whalen had Casey's number and retired the batter at first, ending the inning, with Portland six runs to the good.

Pounding of Pitchers Goes On.

In the fourth Smith opened with another hit and Olson followed suit. Hetling's grounder bounded off Whalen's glove to Darringer, who threw the runner out at first. Gus Fisher once more pasted Whalen for a safe hit, sending Smith and Olson home. Rapps flew to Briggs, but Casey walked. However, Speas was unable to connect, and the two runs were all for Portland that inning.

The ninth and last run of the game was earned by the home team in the seventh, when Casey, Speas and Rynn slammed out successive singles, the former scoring on the latter's hit.

The same teams play again this afternoon, and if Jesse Garrett's arm is feeling right the little Texan will heave for Portland, while Sacramento will depend upon either Nourse or Hant

THE CREAM OF FRENCH PRAIRIE

Located 30 Miles South of Portland; 3/4 Mile From Oregon Electric

Professor J. P. O'Gara, who is proclaimed one of the most efficient horticultural workers who ever visited this state and who, many men of Southern Oregon declare, is entitled to a large credit for Oregon's advanced position in fruit culture and care, makes a plea for small orchard holdings. Resolved into simple language, the professor's argument is that only the owner of a tree will give it the deep, painstaking, intelligent care that produces highest results, and one man can cover but a small orchard tract by his own labors. Incidental to this general condition he says that labor is scarce and for this kind of work will probably continue so. Fruit-picking and packing and even tree culture are spasmodic demands upon the labor supply and they come when other industries are making their heaviest demand.

How much one man should try to handle is not specified positively. Ten acres, however, is about the maximum. If well cultivated and receiving the detailed care which modern conditions impose, 10 acres are too large for one man to cultivate without some hired labor.
