HOQUIAM. Wash., June 3 .- (Special.)-Harry Lund, bookkeeper for the Hoquiam Sash & Door Company, has been missing since Tuesday night and with his disappearance provides the Hoquiam police with one of the strangest cases with which they have had to deal for many

A man of exemplary habits, Lund has descried his position, his rooms in the Y. M. C. A., where he left personal effects worth $150, and his friends, who last night were searching the harbor for him in fear that he had become a victim of foul play or deranged faculties.

came to Hoquiam about four months ago from Everett, where his mother resides. He secured employment with the lumber company and is considered an expert bookkeeper. He lived a quiet, orderly life and his absence cannot be accounted for, save for the fact that he is known to have had trouble with his sweetheart in Everett. Whether brooding over this trouble temporarily deranged his mind or whether he simply gave way and left the city in despair is not known, but his disappearance cannot be connected with any of his actions since coming to Hoquiam.

After receiving his salary check last Saturday, Lund sent $30 to his mother in Everett, who is heartbroken over his dis-appearance. An uncle named Newland was expected here tonight, but he could not be found at the hotels.

Laind's books are all right, according to Manager Hartung, of the lumber company. Lund is described as five feet, ten inches, in height, and of slight build, with dark hair and pale features.

"It is manifest from the information which has been published that legislative corruption has not been confined to the members who have so far confessed their connection with it. The very existence of the so-called "jackpot" presupposes an organization sufficiently strong numerically to get control of the course of legislation and to collect and distribute a common corruption fund to control it.

"There are 125 members in the House and 51 in the Senate, and it is apparent that a very extensive organization would be necessary successfully to carry out such a conspiracy against the public interests as has been shown to exist by the confessions already made. The character of this organization and of its leadership is indicated by the fact that those who confessed were not cure as to the specific bills for which they received bribes.

The whole nefarious plot should be exposed and all connected with it prosecuted and all who are innocent relieved from the burden of unjust susnicion. OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, June 3.— (Special.)— That strong Eastern sentiment in the House of Representatives that believes in Pinchotism and talks of conservation without knowing what it means was wholly responsible for the defeat of the Scnate amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill which proposed to increase from 25 per cent to 35 per cent the amount of forest reserve receipts to be turned over to the respective states in which reserves are located. OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washmost insidious and dangerous of crimes against the state. It makes a farce of party contests and elections. Therefore the Western Senators se-ured an amendment increasing this onation to 25 per cent. But the House donation to 35 per cent. But the House rebelled, and Pinchot sentiment was strong enough to defeat the Senate amendment. The vote of the House was absolutely an indorsement of Pinchotism, for Pinchot, time and again, opposed the giving of any part of this money to the states, and entered objection not only to the initial donation of 10 per cent, but later objected to the raise to 25 per cent.

others from the West made strong pleas to the House to accept the Sen-ate amendment, but without avail. The West was in a hopeless minority, retired from office as chairman of the Democratic State Committee yesterday and John A. Dix. of Greenwich, was elected in his place.

Mr. Dix told the committeemen that he proposed to be chairman of the whole party and not of any faction.

The retirement of Conners follows a meeting of the committee in Albany last February to consider the question of his ejection. Conners denied that it was possible. Friends of Murphy said he had the votes to do it. Whether he had or he had not, he did not use them. Conners made a public retraction of his criticisms of Murphy which arose, he said, from infirmities of temper, and agreed to retire this Spring.

Work of Pioneers Hardy.

I was born and raised in Oregon and have intimate knowledge of pioneer conditions, and this is what this amendment will assist in doing if it is agreed to by the House: Men and women, hardy pioneers, go out into the foothills along the river valleys and uplands of smaller streams and take parcels of Government land for the purpose of making homes. Others come in and join them. In the time a small seitlement is created, and schools are established. At a great expense to themselves of labor and money, they must maintain roads between the settlements and the markets in which they sell their products and from which they buy the necessaries of life.

In the ordinary course of events, under former conditions, when all the lands hetween these outlying settlements and the markets and the more densely settled portions of the country were open to settlement, settlers located in between and assisted them in the maintenance of roads and in the development of schools. The construction of roads followed the course of settlement and extended as the settlements extended, each person along the line of the road sasisting in its building and maintenance.

But with the establishment of forest rewere granted to 124 students of the 38 night school courses of the Portland Young Men's Christian Association Thursday night at the closing exercises in the association auditorium. The auditorium was well filled and keen interest was shown in the exhibition of the work done by the students, which had But with the establishment of forest re-serves—and I am making no quarrel with the National forest policy in this—there are placed between these settlements and the more thickly settled portions of the coun-try and the markets areat areas on which more thickey settice portions of the country and the markets great areas on which settlers can not go except to a limited extent, because the policy of the Forest Service, as I have found it to be, is to retain all lands as forest unless it is most clearly established that they are more valuable for agricultural purposes. With this establishment of vast wild areas between these outlying settlements and the more developed portions of the country two things result. First, the settlers must be at a greater expense of labor and money than they can afford to built roads and maintain schools. They must maintain schools or else they must abandon their homes, and some are doing so. Tonight the annual gymnasium exhibition will be held, which will end the classes for the season. A contest for medals will be had on the parallel bars, horizontal bar and horse. The programme will commence at 8 o'clock must abandon their homes, and some are doling so.

It has been reported in the press in the Northwest many times recently, and in papers of reputable standing, that more than 100,000 persons of those who have gone to the Northwest seeking homes, and including a number of people of the public-land states who under ordinary conditions have gone to the Government land and founded homes, have left the Northwest and the United States and have gone into the adfacent territories of Canada. Now, that is not good for the people of the East or of the West. These hardy ploneers have always rendered to the country a greater service than they have ever been recompensed for by giving them lands for homes.

Adequate Relief Granted.

They have made it possible for the Government to extend its domain from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. This proposed amendment grants a more adequate relief to the people who are thus separated from markets and who must, at great expense maintain roads to get their products to them across the forest reserves in whole or in part, and to compensate them for the loss of taxes that would be derived from these lands if they were subject to private ownership; and we ask this, that the areas of cuitivated land, which support large numbers of our people and increase the general food supply, may be increased.

The former Chief Forester of the United States said before the committee on agriculture two or three years ago that the settlers in and around the forest reserves of the United States were of the greatest assistance to the general forest policy of the Government in alding in protecting the forests from fire, and that they render valuable service by friendly relations with forest rangers. The Government receives an adequate return for anything it may do for them.

We should encourage settlers to stay and develop the waste places of the country and to take up all the agricultural lands. You also know that Americans will not remain in any place to raise a family and develop the country unless they may have an opportunity to educate their children. Make this increase given by this proposed amendment, and give them the advantage of a little assistance in this way in the maintenance of schools. If it were not for the forest policy, they would ask nothing of the Government. The settlers under former conditions were able to take care of themselves in the matter of roads and achools. Stateen million acres of the total area of 61,000,000 acres included within the boundaries of the State of Oregon are within forest reserves today, and out of that more than 10,000,000 acres—are susceptible of profitable cultivation and would be settled upon if open to settlement. But the present difficulties surrounding the settlement of the lands now open to entry under the law are such that the relief asked for in this amendment will accomplish a great good, and I earnessly unge that the agreed to. package, attacked Postal Inspector O'Con-nell in the United States Courtroom. During the two years that the restraining order was in effect, preventing the

The Commission will endeavor to compel the rallroad company to refund the difference between the rate fixed by the

The rallroad's contention is that the the contention of Mr. Cotton, still retain their interstate commerce character, even though the goods are resold in the

it is consigned, and comes under the
