EDUCATOR IS SCATHING

Flexner's Report to Carnegie Foundation for Advancement of Teaching Suggests Many Reforms Needed in America.

NEW YORK, June & .- The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement Teaching issued yesterday a most sig-nificant report on medical education in the United States and Canada. The report was prepared by Abraham Flexreport was prepared by Abraham Flexner and contains an introductory statement by Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegle Foundation.

The significant facts which the report proves are. in President Pritchett's judgment, the following: (1) There has been for a quarter of a century past an enormous over-production of ill-trained doctors; (2) this over-supply of ill-trained men is to be ascribed to the existence of independent or proprietary schools, commercially managed and dependent on fees for support; (3) the cheap quality of most of the instruction furnished by medical schools; (4) the fallacy of the idea that these ineffective schools are justified by the argument that they enable poor boys to get a chance in the medical profession: (5) the necessity for a complete revision of the arrangements that now hold as between medical schools and the hospitals in which their clinical instruction is given.

Investigation Is Personal.

Investigation Is Personal. The report that follows is based on a The report that follows is based on a personal investigation of every medical school in the United States and Canada by its author, Mr. Flexner. Mr. Flexner is a teacher, not a medical man. He was for many years engaged in secondary school teaching in Louisville, subsequently spending several years in this country and abroad in the study of educational problems and institutions.

The report undertakes to set forth that the country is supporting three

The report undertakes to set forth that the country is supporting three or four times as many doctors as it requires, mostly trained in inferior schools; that our medical schools are still producing between two and three times as many as can be assimilated; that instead of the 155 schools now existing one-fifth of the number, properly supported and distributed, can produce all the physicians required, much better trained than they can now be.

Science Training Needed.

It is demonstrated that a preliminary training in science is a necessary prerequisite to modern medical training at its best. Nevertheless, in some states, notably Pennsylvania, Illinois, Missouri, California, etc., many medical schools do not require even a high school education. In the South, secondary schools and colleges are more backward. For though all pretend to enforce a definite entrance requirement, scarcely more nite entrance requirement, scarcely more

For though all pretend to enforce a defi-nite entrance requirement, scarcely more than 30 of the 155 do so.

The teaching facilities are next sur-veyed by the author from the same point of view. It develops that out of 155 medical schools only some 30-odd are now fairly equipped with the necessary inboratories, which all claim to possess; fewer than 30 enjoy ac-ceptable hospital facilities. Only about ceptable hospital facilities. Only about a dozen medical schools have the clinical facilities that they need.

Schools are found whose graduates go forth without any practical knowledge of ordinary acute diseases or of obstetrics. Some decidedly pretentious institutions are named which are conducted on the entirely mistaken notion that an abundance of surgical operations which the student watches at long range is a substitute for a close knowledge of medical cases.

STACY- A DAMS

by the Author of THE INNER SHRINE

A Remarkable New Novel

Ready at Last in Book Form

The Chicago Journal, in a column review, says:

"THE WILD OLIVE," a second novel of the anonymous author of "The Inner Shrine," is so much more interesting than the earlier book that this reviewer is now inclined to ascribe to the unknown author those dent partisans of that writer insisted on as characteristic of the first novel. "THE WILD OLIVE" has a broader basis of plot, a finer conception of character and a higher idealism than was apparent in "The Inner Shrine." "THE WILD OLIVE" is a story in a new setting, a story that seizes the reader from the first chapter—a story of great vigor and charm. The scene opens in the Adirondack wilderness, with a fugitive from justice, young and a gentleman, running through the woods at night. Looking through a cottage window, he recognizes the judge who condemned him-innocent. A girl's form outside beckons him to follow. The story rushes on, carrying the youth into rehabilitated manhood and the girl to
