

CREOSUS OF INDIA VISITS PORTLAND

Famous Maharaja Gaekwar and Wife See City in Finest of Autos.

RICH MAN TOURS WORLD

Owner of Almost Priceless Diamond Necklace, Attired in Common American Dress, Seeking Seclusion in His Trip.

Stripped of royal robes and ostentatious display, Gena Khas Khei, his Highness the Maharaja Gaekwar, S. L. Samsher Bahadur, and her Highness the Maharani, C. L. of Baroda, India, accompanied by the Gaekwar's aide-de-camp, and four servants, arrived on the Shasta Limited yesterday for a brief visit to Portland.

The Gaekwar of Baroda, as he is better known, possesses fabulous wealth, and is on a three months' trip around the world to rest and recuperate and restore his health, which has been impaired by years of arduous duty as head of the department of state of Baroda. Four years ago his Highness and the Maharani took a longer vacation and visited the principal cities of the United States at their leisure. This trip is more hurried, and he will remain in the United States about a month.

Royal Party Off Today.

The royal party will leave this morning at 8:30 o'clock for Seattle, and then to Vancouver and Banff, B. C., where his Highness will be joined by his son, Prince Jaisingar, who is finishing his second year in Harvard, and his daughter, the Princess Indira Raja, who left her father and mother in San Francisco for a trip through the Yosemite Valley. The Princess was accompanied by his Highness' secretary, Miss West, an English companion, and three servants.

The ruler of Baroda, his family and retinue of servants, arrived in San Francisco on the Siberia last Friday. The finest suite in the Palace Hotel was reserved for them, but after a short visit in the Golden Gate city, the royal group broke up and is now traveling almost incognito.

When the family is reunited at Banff several days will be spent in the Annapolis Rockies and they will then leave for the Great Lakes, visiting the principal cities and making at least a part of the trip by water. A stop of a few days will be made in New York, from which city the party will sail for England. The Gaekwar will be received by King George and later consult specialists and noted physicians of the British Empire about his health. A trip to some famous watering-place in Europe will, then be made, and after a rest the royal party will return to India by way of an eastern route.

Wealth Is Like Creosus.

The wealth of the Gaekwar runs into many millions and the entrance of his magnificent palace in Baroda is guarded by four cannons, two of silver and two of gold. Only the inner tubes of the guns are steel. He is the owner of the most famous diamond necklace in the world, composed of 200 precious stones and valued at $12,000,000. Among other gems in his possession is the "Star of the South," the fifth largest diamond in the world, which is attached as a pendant to a diamond cigarette.

Leaving the precious jewels and regal dress at home, his Highness and the Maharani are attired in common American dress and are seeking seclusion. The aide-de-camp stood between his Highness and all interviewers, who flatter and inquire, saying the party had been annoyed ever since leaving Japan, and that the Maharaja desired quiet and rest.

ACCUSED MAN WAS FRIEND

Estacada Falls to Prosecute for Alleged Theft of Watch.

Bill Irwin, accused of stealing a watch from J. O. Linn, was discharged from custody in Municipal Court yesterday, while Linn was held for $5 costs, because, after wasting two days of the court's time, he showed great unwillingness to prosecute the case.

Linn came to the city recently from Estacada and proceeded to have a joyous time. He was soon helplessly intoxicated and Irwin, who was an old acquaintance, relieved him of his watch. Irwin says that he did so because he felt sure that Linn would lose it otherwise. That he made no secret of the fact that he had it was shown by the testimony of the proprietress of the rooming-house in which Linn stayed, who said that Irwin had told her that he had the watch for safe-keeping. Irwin says that Linn was relieved of his money by two women. With the watch, Irwin took a wallet containing a deed for some land, which mentioned a consideration of $500.

The case was called for trial Saturday, but before it was reached on the docket Linn tired of waiting in the courtroom and disappeared. Just before the court adjourned he reappeared in a highly intoxicated condition, and postponement was had until yesterday, Irwin being released on his recognizance. In the time intervening before the trial yesterday Irwin had seen Linn, giving him a grilling for his ingratitude, and that unwillingly. He was denounced on all sides, by Irwin's and by the state's attorneys, and was assessed the costs of the case.

MYRTLE POINT, June 20.—William Carver is being treated here for injuries sustained through the failure of a brake to work on his wagon while descending a grade four miles from here, which caused him to lose control of the four-horse team, which fell over a bank and into the river. ### FOSTER LIKELY MAN

Reed Institute Will Probably Name Him President.

FINAL DECISION NOT MADE

Educator Is in Portland Now, at Invitation of Board of Trustees, Confering About Plans for New University.

Selection of a president for the Reed Institute, the university for which an endowment of $3,000,000 was left by the late Mrs. Amanda W. Reed, is a matter now being considered by the Board of Trustees of the institution. Professor William T. Foster, of Brunswick, Maine, is now in Portland, upon the invitation from the trustees, and he will spend the next few days discussing with the trustees as to plans for the new Portland university. It is possible that he may be selected as president of the institution.

Foster's Selection Likely.

Dr. T. L. Elliot, chairman of the board of trustees, said yesterday that Professor Foster had been highly recommended and there was a probability that he would be chosen as the head of the university, although the matter had not been definitely decided. Professor Foster is a young man. He is a graduate of Harvard University of the class of 1901 and received his master's degree from Harvard in 1904. Until last year he was professor of English at Bowdoin College, at Brunswick, Me., and for the last year has been lecturer in educational administration at Columbia University, New York. He was lecturer in 1909 in principles of education at the Harvard Summer School and will return July 1 to Columbia University to lecture on educational administration. Universities Are Visited.

He has been visiting a number of the large Western colleges this summer, having, on his trip west, visited and investigated conditions at the University of Chicago, the University of Minnesota, the University of Washington, and other institutions. He will visit other universities before returning to the East. "I am tremendously pleased with Portland," said Professor Foster, last night. "It is a wonderful city, a great city, and is so much more than I expected to find."

Pressed for a definite statement as to whether he would accept the presidency of the Reed Institute if it were offered him, he asked to be excused.

DID YOU READ THE SUNDAY OREGONIAN?

Did you see the write-up on KLAMATH FALLS? If not, find that paper and look in the middle of Section Three. It will pay you to read that carefully. Coming from a disinterested man, it should carry great weight; yet he is only one of hundreds who have viewed the wonderful KLAMATH COUNTRY and have caught the fever, as have Mr. Johnson, Mr. Wendling and other men, heavyweights in the world of finance and industry.

It makes us proud to stand shoulder to shoulder with men who realize there is something in life besides the dollar mark, men who are developing an immense empire and laying the foundation for thousands of happy homes. We want you to join us in this great work. If you have not found your ideal for a home, let us show you KLAMATH FALLS, the place that E. H. Harriman picked for his world-renowned "Pelican Lodge." Klamath Falls offers you a share in her million and more acreage of tillable land, her twenty thousand million feet of standing timber, her water-power five times greater than Spokane, and her untold mineral resources.

KLAMATH FALLS

On the two greatest railway systems of the United States, and the keenest business men of San Francisco, Portland and Sacramento see in KLAMATH FALLS the commercial key to fifty thousand square miles of territory.

When men like Corbett, Shevlin, Talbot and Menefee, of Portland, decide that KLAMATH FALLS is a good place in which to invest their money, can you do better than to follow the path which they are blazing to financial success?

We well know that the average man accepts with a grain of salt statements made by real estate dealers. We also know that most real estate dealers have high sense of honor, but we are not asking you to accept our unsupported word. Listen to men who have no interest there, but a desire to develop a wonderful country:

Colonel Hofer, of Salem: "I have been in all parts of Oregon, but when I stood in KLAMATH FALLS and saw the great fan-shaped valley stretching to the south, east and west I was forced to admit that it was one of the very best in Oregon."

W. D. Smith, pioneer from Vancouver: "I went to KLAMATH FALLS a skeptic, but have come away an enthusiast. I have purchased property there and may some day make it my home."

W. W. Aldridge, Oregon City: "It certainly is the most wonderful country I have seen in Oregon."

William P. Strandborg, Portland: "If the area under the Government ditch were sown in alfalfa alone it would bring an income to the valley of $25,000,000 annually."

We want your interests centered in KLAMATH FALLS—your home if possible—but we want you to know what is there.

Phone us and we will be glad to call on you, or call and we will be glad to show you this great country in its entirety.
