

DAY OF QUIET NOT LIKE THE FOURTH

Portland Gives Real Trial to Safe and Sane Plan and Is Pleased.

FIREWORKS IN DISGRACE

Small Boy Is Only One Displeased With Abeyance of Timeworn Customs—Fight Fans Find Only True Cause for Excitement.

Patriotism expressed itself in a murmur yesterday in Portland. There wasn't a great deal of noise, no high explosions were used, the fireworks were limited and no one was displeased. The city enjoyed the sanest Fourth yet experienced. It required a constant exercise of the imagination to realize that the day was the once glorious Fourth. In bygone years of unexpressed noise more emotion was in the air a week before the day than appeared at any time yesterday.

Yet the populace seemed to enjoy itself hugely. The quietly-disposed spent a refreshing and exhilarating day in the woods. The fight-mad part of the populace had excitement enough for half a dozen Fourth's. The small boy was allowed to discharge Lilliputian firecrackers to his heart's content. Then there were horse races, boat races, a couple of baseball games, and a variety of minor diversions for all sorts and conditions of pleasure-seekers.

There is no way of naming an accurate figure for the number of people that went out of town for the day may be safely approximated at 50,000. Every outgoing boat, car and local train was fairly bursting with humanity. People went down the river, up the river, and to the woods and streams in all directions. Hundreds left in rigs and automobiles and scores even went away on foot.

Organized picnics were innumerable. Sunday school classes, clubs, societies and employers' picnics were held. People went out in groups laden with good things to eat. Some of them took firecrackers along, too, but for the most part they confined themselves to literary programmes, athletic contests, romps in the open and quiet hours in the shade. The crashing of soda crackers and the roar of ginger snaps took ascendancy over the firing of giant crackers and toy cannons.

It was not until along towards night that the streets of the city began echoing in a manner faintly suggestive of the day. Then the rattle of small crackers, abridged by police orders, burst onto the stillly air with the intensity and volume of a box of parlor matches. Now and then some ingenious archer tortured a little extra noise out of a cracker by covering it with a tin can. This device produced something the effect of a real giant cracker and several times prying policemen were fretted into a run by the noise.

The night was not barren of fireworks, either. Even before darkness drew on lighted balloons could be sighted gliding over the city while here and there a skyrocket wormed its way above the sky line of big buildings and burst into a shower of many-colored fire. The one thing that made the day intense, though, was the night news. Tens of thousands of men and boys and hundreds of women were downtown during the few brief moments that were required to transform an unbeaten white champion into a third-rate dub. These crowds were surprised with excitement. Had the American arms been engaged in forcing back a formidable invasion, interest could hardly have been more marked than in many quarters during the battle of Ilat.

When the farce was over these crowds turned attention to the reading of the extras and the streets were fairly blocked throughout the business districts by groups of men and big boys standing in the observation of the in print. The streets, afterwards, were carpeted with discarded newspapers. Outlying districts were hardly as sane as Portland in the observations of the day. At Vancouver, St. Johns and Oregon City reports indicate that the people followed in the beaten path of 134 years of precedent. The people in those places heralded the day with crackers big enough to simulate the crashing of almighty American artillery. Deep chested orators declaimed in a fashion calculated to send the thrills of patriotism up and down the spines of patriotic hearers. Hundreds of Portlanders joined with these towns in their formal celebrations.

So far as Portland is concerned it was the last Fourth upon which the crackling of parlor match firecrackers will be tolerated. Next year the new anti-noise law goes into effect and the noisy patriotic will have to learn to sing psalms and speak in a whisper during Independence day.

HIGHEST MAGISTRATE IN THE LAND, WHO DIED YESTERDAY.

CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER.

CHIEF JUSTICE DIES

Daughter and Friend Are at Jurist's Bedside at End.

CHIEF JUSTICE 22 YEARS

After Attending Church According to Custom, Justice Fuller Retired, Apparently in Good Health—Was 78 Years Old.

(Continued From First Page.) Those prominent in the fight over his confirmation, only Senator Cullom remains, and President Cleveland, who thus honored the Illinois lawyer, has likewise gone to his grave.

The services of Chief Justice Fuller were noted for the dignity with which he filled the position. He preserved that manner, whether on the bench or off it. Although small of stature, not more than 5 feet 7 inches, his wealth of silvery hair and classic features made him a commanding figure wherever he appeared.

Twain's Joke on Fuller.

Probably Mark Twain resembled the Chief Justice in physical appearance more than any other man of prominence in recent years. Frequently the humorist was mistaken for the jurist. One day a young woman asked Mark Twain on the street and with the apology that she had never seen the Chief Justice before, asked for his autograph.

The author wrote, "It is delicious to be full. But it is heavenly to be Fuller. I am cordially yours, 'MELVILLE W. FULLER'."

The late Chief Justice, as far as known, never expressed his opinion of what he thought of Twain for playing that little joke on him.

Chief Justice Fuller reflected to a great extent his research into literature by the style of his opinions and addresses. In the earlier days, after going on the bench, he wrote some poetry and now and then lapsed into poetical touches in his opinions from the bench. One of the best illustrations of this was the opinion he handed down in the case of Hammond vs. Hopkins. He concluded his opinion by saying:

"In all cases where actual fraud is not made out, but the imputation rests on conjecture, where the seal of death has closed the lips of those who character is involved and lapse of time has impaired the recollection of transactions and obscured their details, the welfare of society demands the rigid enforcement of the rule of diligence. The hour-glass must be handed down in the case of Hammond vs. Hopkins. His death today recalls his words on such cases expressed at the centenary of the court 29 years ago: 'Judges will be appointed,' said he, 'and will pass away. One generation rapidly succeeds another. But whoever comes and whoever goes, the court re-

OREGON TO SHARE IRRIGATION FUND

Extension of Umatilla Project Westward Likely to Be Authorized.

BALLINGER TO THE RESCUE

Declares Blunder of Chamberlain and Bourne Should Have Shut Oregon Out, but Thinks State Is Entitled to Share.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, July 4.—(Special.)—Secretary Ballinger after giving careful consideration to appeals made to him by Representatives Ellis and Hawley before they left for Oregon, has come to the conclusion that Oregon is entitled to share in the distribution of the $20,000,000 irrigation fund made available by Congress just before adjournment, and it now seems quite likely that extension of the Umatilla project westward with a view to irrigating 60,000 acres more, will be authorized, and that part of this fund will be allotted to begin construction.

Blunder Almost Fatal

Secretary Ballinger points out that repeal of section nine of the reclamation act, which was permitted without protest from Senators Bourne and Chamberlain, relieves both the President and himself of any obligation to apportion further funds to Oregon at this time, but personally the Secretary believes Oregon should be shown consideration, particularly as it is the second heaviest contributor to the reclamation fund, and has never been given a square deal by previous Secretaries of the Interior.

Umatilla to Get Money

There are but two projects in Oregon to which funds can be allotted, and it is certain Klamath can receive nothing. This makes it obligatory to make an allotment for the Umatilla extension and in case the report of the Army Engineer Board is favorable it is now believed Secretary Ballinger will recommend to the President that the west side Umatilla project be built. It is estimated to cost $2,550,000. While the whole amount may not be allotted out of the $20,000,000 fund, enough will be provided, if extension is authorized to carry the work through the present season, and finish it with money from the regular fund.

This is an unexpected change on the part of the Administration, for up to this time the Umatilla project has not been regarded with particular favor. Secretary Ballinger personally, however, wants to do what he can for his neighboring state, and in case the allotment is made it will be entirely on his recommendation and in accordance with the requests of Representatives Ellis and Hawley.

Railroad Equipment Destroyed.

roundhouse of the Montana, Wyoming & Southern Railway, and the only two locomotives possessed by the company. The line extends from the Bridger and Bear Creek coal fields.

OFFICIAL GRAFTING, ART

Poland and Turkestan Overrun by Clever "Workers."

WARSAW, July 4.—(Special.)—Graft has been cried to a fine art by an official named Zielenki, "referee" of the postal department. As a result of the Senatorial Revision carried out at the instance of the Czar, further disclosures of wholesale corruption among Russian officials have come to light. Zielenki carried on his graft with cynical and scientific thoroughness. He elaborated a perfect system of bribery and organized a schedule of charges for keeping clerks in their places and appointing new ones to vacancies. The candidates paid ten per cent on their first year's salaries. Those who were already installed were "taxed." Men who refused to pay were threatened with dismissal.

Even the prisons have been reached by the revision, but I doubt if it will do any permanent good. Most of the prisons are in a terrible condition, and in this respect people are afraid that Poland will share the fate of Turkestan. When the Government in St. Petersburg saw the reports of a similar revision there, they got a shock. The disclosures were so appalling that the Chamber decided it would be better to put them in the archives "for fear of compromising Russian bureaucracy." This report has been hidden accordingly and the official hoodlums of Turkestan are flourishing unmolested.

Camas Blues Meet Defeat.

CANBY, Or., July 4.—(Special.)—The crack Canby team defeated the heretofore undefeated Camas Blues at Gladstone Park today by the score of 4 to 2. Hensling was in the box for Canby, and deserved a shout-out raw decisions giving Camas their runs. Camas was outplayed throughout the game both at bat and in the field. Much money was wagered on the outcome which settles more than one discussion in regard to the relative merits of the teams.

Knees Became Stiff

Five Years of Severe Rheumatism.

The cure of Henry J. Goldstein, 14 Barton Street, Boston, Mass., in another victory by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine has succeeded in many cases where others have utterly failed. Mr. Goldstein says: "I suffered from rheumatism five years. It kept me from business and caused excruciating pain. My knees would become as stiff as steel. I tried many medicines without relief, then took Hood's Sarsaparilla, soon felt much better, and now consider myself entirely cured. I recommend Hood's."
